Hitler's Losses 4,500,000 Men

Candidates Given Poor Reception At Calder

17-Year-Old Girl Is Feature Of Meeting: She Speaks For Father

Featured by a speech by 17-year-old Lola Patterson, who spoke on behalf of her father, Guy Patterson, K.C., aldermanic candidate on the Civic Progressive Association slate, Wednesday night's civic election campaign meeting at Calder school gave a poor reception to candidates.

Only 15 electors were in attendance at the meeting when it opened and this dwindled to eight before the last candidate was heard.

Youthful Miss Patterson conducted herself like a veteran campaigner as she took the "stump" for her father, who was unavoidably absent. She received warm applause from the meeting.

William MacKenzie was chairman.

Ald. George A. Campbell, Citizens' Committee mayoralty candidate, while paying tribute to some of the fine qualities of his opponent, was critical of his extravagant claims to credit for Edmonton's recent advancement made by Mayor John W. Fry. He contended that the city commissioners, the ten members of the aldermanic board, the heads of civic departments and the loyal civic workers were entitled to their share of praise and credit for any advancement made during the past four years. "A city the size of Edmonton is not under the thumb of any one man," he added.

Says He Got Co-Operation

Mayor John W. Fry, Independent mayoralty candidate, declared that the aldermen and commissioners had co-operated with him "in the city's financial and other advancement."

He stressed the fact that during his regime the taxpayers had benefitted by a reduction in the mill rate from 55 mills to 51.5 in spite of a bank overdraft of nearly $2,000,000, which had now been reduced to $250,000.

Ald. H. D. Ainlay, aldermanic candidate on the Canadian Labor Party ticket, declared he favored a gradual reduction in utility rates so those who had built up the surpluses would benefit from them.

This stand also was supported by Miss Margaret Crang, running on the Civic Progressive slate as an aldermanic candidate. She also stated cost-of-living bonuses should be paid civic employees and families of men on active service to meet the rising cost of living.

Ald. George A. Campbell (Citizens' Committee, mayoralty): While I can commend some of the fine qualities of my opponent, I cannot subscribe to the extravagant claims he has made of responsibility for Edmonton progress in the past four years. We all realize that a city the size of Edmonton is not under the thumb of one man. There are the city commissioners; the ten aldermen; there are the heads of civic departments, and their staffs. All these men have worked hard to accomplish the progress that has been made by the city during the past four years.

The saving of $117,000 annually in gas rates which we now enjoy was put through by city council. The suggestion for this rate reduction came from ex-Ald. Hugh John Macdonald. Edmonton's popular soft-water addition to the water works plant was first proposed by Ald. A. Blair Paterson and later passed by city council.

The two major events which improved the city's position financially and materially were merely circumstance. There is the remarkable performance of our taxpayers which, with increased population, put property on the tax assessment rolls.

The other circumstance was that money for civic improvements was released from our sinking fund, under the Fortin plan, during the mayor's first term of office.

I would like to bring up the question of retention of civic employees after the retiring age of 65. Some weeks ago a recommendation was presented to the city council and referred to the bylaws committee providing that all employees of a retirement age should be permitted to continue in the city's employ for the war's duration.

This is in direct opposition to the pension arrangement made several years ago, an agreement whereby civic employees contributed to a fund to provide retirement and pension allowances.

Under this agreement the retiring age was fixed for male employees at 65, and for female at 60. These retirement ages were fixed for two reasons. To ensure efficiency in all branches of civic service, and to allow the opportunity for junior members of the service whose progress might be blocked indefinitely.

In good faith all employees have paid their money into the pension fund. The proposal to scrap that agreement would also scrap the privileges which the employees are rightfully expecting. In plain English, it would be dishonest to change the present retirement plan of our civic administration.

Let us review the closely related old age pensions. Controversy has run rampant, but my stand can be made clear in very few words: I am not only in favor of increasing the old age pensions, but I am in favor of doing it now. Let us give the benefits of such a plan to those who are still with us, rather than wait for a prolonged series of con-

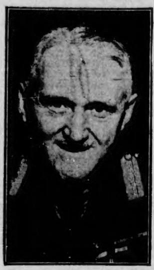
Moscow Siege Lines Split

To Australia



Maj.-Gen. Victor W. Odlum, commander of the 2nd Division overseas, has been appointed Canadian high commissioner in Australia, it was announced in the House of Commons today by Prime Minister Mackenzie King.

Odlum Named Commissioner In Australia

OTTAWA, Nov. 6. — (CP) — Prime Minister Mackenzie King today announced in the House of Commons that Maj.-Gen. Victor W. Odlum, commander of the 2nd Division overseas, has been appointed Canadian high commissioner in Australia.

Mr. King said that in view of the situation in the Orient the government had decided the best possible appointment to the Australian post should be made.

The government felt nobody was so well-qualified for the post as Gen. Odlum if he could be persuaded to accept.

Mr. King reviewed other appointments to the diplomatic service of Canada recently, including ministers to Brazil and Argentina and Chile and high commissioners to Eire and Newfoundland.

The appointment of Charles J. Burchell, former high commissioner in Australia, to Newfoundland left vacant the post now being filled by Gen. Odlum.

Mr. King also said the government is ready to appoint a minister to Japan but has no means of sending one there as there is no transportation.

Today's War Moves

By LOUIS F. KEEMLE
Copyright, 1941, by British United Press

JAPAN has shelved for a time the threat of hostilities in the Pacific which she has been holding over the United States in an effort to get her own way in the Far East.

The dispatch to Washington of Saburo Kurusu as special envoy with a "final" compromise proposal to end the difficulties between the two countries undoubtedly means she will make no important moves in the international field until Kurusu's mission to Washington is completed.

That might be weeks or it might be months. Any time gained would be so much velvet for the United States, which appears determined to reject Japan's demands as so far outlined and is busy strengthening her defences on both oceans.

STALLING FOR TIME

The Japanese are earnestly seeking an agreement with the United States, but they also are stalling for time. They do not want to get off the fence and commit themselves while the issue of the world war still is so much in doubt. Japan wants no partnership with an Axis headed for defeat.

The timing of Kurusu's slightly

Roosevelt Urges Free Nations To Plan Sound Social, Economic World

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—(AP)—President Roosevelt declared today that the American people had made "an unlimited commitment" that there shall be a free world, and called on all free nations to plan for a sound social and economic world order after the war.

The President also assailed a "misguided" few—both industrialists and leaders of labor—for placing personal advantage above the welfare of the United States and for delaying defence output by using their "economic power" to force acceptance of their demands rather than using established mediation machinery.

Addressing 250 delegates representing 33 nations at the concluding session of the international labor office conference in the east room of the White House, the President said:

"The American people have made an unlimited commitment that there shall be a free world. Against that commitment, no individual or group shall prevail."

Berlin Slave Market Of World

Declaring that Labor under the Nazi system had become the "slave of the military state," and that Berlin today was the "principal slave market of the world," Mr. Roosevelt added:

"The American worker has no illusions about the fate that awaits him and his free Labor organizations if Hitler should win. He knows that his own liberty and the very safety of the people of the United States cannot be assured in a world which is three-fourths slave and one-fourth free. He knows that we must furnish arms to Britain, Russia and China and that we must do it now—today."

The President said the place of the whole western hemisphere in a German drive for world domination had been marked on the Nazi timetable, and the choice America had to make was between realism "in terms of three shifts a day" to produce necessary defence materials and the attitude of the "blind and the deluded" who think that business can be done with Hitler and that American armament output is satisfactory.

Bracken Offered Tory Leadership

May Be Leader

PREMIER JOHN BRACKEN (of Manitoba)

By NORMAN MacLEOD

OTTAWA, Nov. 6—(BUP)—On unimpeachable authority it may be stated today that Premier John Bracken of Manitoba, has been approached to lead the federal Conservative party and that he is now considering the answer he will give.

Conservative circles here state that Premier Bracken promised his reply either late today or early tomorrow—in time for his decision to be made known to the conference of Conservatives from coast to coast that is scheduled to give consideration to the party leadership problem.

If Mr. Bracken accepts the overtures that have been made, he will have Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighen, ex-premier and once national leader, as his chief lieutenant in the House of Commons, it was learned.

HAS NO PARTY LABEL

Meighen, who himself has figured during the past week as a prospective dramatic draftee into party leadership for the duration, is known to have endorsed the movement to obtain the Manitoba premier. He is even said to have

R.A.F. Strikes At Nazi Ships

LONDON, Nov. 6.—(CP)—Smashing at German shipping last night on a broad sea front, the Royal Air Force was reported officially to have bombed several ships in a well-defended convoy off the Frisian Islands and one was seen ablaze. The raids cost Britain eight planes.

Aircraft of the coastal command also attacked German shipping off The Netherlands mainland. British losses were divided between the bomber and coastal commands.

The operations were carried into the continental channel ports, the Air Ministry said, and mines were sown by low-flying planes.

Harriman Going Back To London

LONDON, Nov. 6—(CP)—Informed sources said today W. Averell Harriman would return to London early next week to resume his duties as United States supervisor of the lend-lease program. These sources said he would bring an outline of President Roosevelt's ideas for aiding Russia in co-ordination with British efforts.

Aid Is Growing

Premier Joseph Stalin, above, declared in a speech today that Russia was handicapped by lack of a second front in Europe, but that British and U. S. aid is of great importance and is growing continually.

By The Canadian Press

Hitler's boast that German victory would attend the drive on Moscow in the "last great, decisive battle of this year" has been exploded by tenacious Soviet resistance, informed London quarters said today, declaring Hitler now has abandoned hope of capturing either Moscow or Leningrad this winter.

On the fighting front, masses of Russian reserves were reported to have broken through Nazi siege lines before the U.S.S.R. capital, while on the Southern (Ukraine) front, Soviet dispatches said the Germans are retreating from a corpse-strewn zone of the Donets River Basin.

Informed quarters in London said the German air force was withdrawing most of its planes from the Moscow, Leningrad and far north fronts, leaving land forces to carry on "defensive" winter campaign.

CHINESE WILL HELP

These quarters said there were indications that the Germans had given up hope of capturing either Moscow or Leningrad this winter.

Meanwhile, a broadcast from Hsinking, capital of Japanese-dominated Manchukuo, reported

Question Of National Service Is Replacing Issue Of Conscription

By B. T. RICHARDSON
Edmonton Bulletin Ottawa Bureau

OTTAWA, Nov. 6.—The manpower problem, otherwise known as the conscription issue, has taken a new turn in Ottawa since the arrival of members of parliament from all corners of the country. Canvasses of member opinion shows that an acute labor problem is rising in Canada, that shortage of farm help is already serious in some parts.

Discussion of the problem is moving away from the contentious political issue of conscription for army service overseas, towards the question of national service. The impression is confirmed among rural M.P.'s both from western and eastern constituencies that conscription as such is a political impossibility, and noteworthy in this connection is the position taken by the Conservative opposition in refusing to come all out for conscription.

ACUTE SCHORTAGE

But throughout Ontario and in some parts of the west, the shortage of farm labor is so acute that many members are definitely interested in proposals that will guarantee enough help for the farmers, for lumbering operations this winter, and for other primary industries.

This is where the manpower shortage is being felt keenly at present, and as the members compare notes they have found the shortage of men for the army is only one phase of the problem.

It is expected that the decision will be left largely to the war cabinet, on the basis of the manpower survey announced recently by Hon. J. T. Thorson and confirmed by Hon. J. L. Ralston in the house last night.

Pundits of eastern influential newspapers are urging Mr. King to clarify the need for men in the armed services, which means forecasting the number of divisions Canada can expect to raise. But opposed to the big army advocates there is stronger opinion than observers here had realized in favor of caution, since depletion of industrial and agricultural manpower resources is plainly possible.

Daughter Of M.P. Is Electrocuted

LONDON, Nov. 6.— (CP) — Mary Clement Davies, only daughter of Clement Davies, member of parliament, was found electrocuted Wednesday night at an Auxiliary Territorial Service training school in the south of England. She was an A.T.S. lance corporal. Her body was found at the foot of an electric pylon near the camp by an A.T.S. officer who saw a flash in the darkness soon after the blackout went into effect.

Candidates To Give Speeches On South Side

South Side residents tonight will hear candidates in the November 12 civic elections voice their policies on civic administration.

The second official meeting of the campaign will be held in the Scona Assembly Hall, 10313 Whyte avenue, starting at 8 p.m.

With the campaign gathering "steam," it is expected that tonight's meeting will hear contentious questions aired.

It was learned that announcements of new proposals, which have not been discussed in the speeches so far, will be made at this meeting.

Several candidates have intimated that they will outline for the first time, plans which they have been considering for some time.

The two candidates for mayor, the present Mayor John W. Fry, who is running as an independent for a fifth term, and Ald. G. A. Campbell, who has replaced the mayor on the Citizens' Committee slate, will both speak.

All candidates for aldermanic and school board seats also will give addresses.

Advance Poll To Open On Friday

The last detail of organization for Edmonton municipal election was completed Thursday, Returning Officer Alfred Russell stated, and everything is in readiness for the opening of the advance poll on Friday at 1 p.m. This poll is being held in the city assessor's office, Civic Block.

Polling hours are from 1 to 6 p.m. on Friday and from 1 to 9 p.m. on Saturday. Electors who have reason to believe they will be absent from the city on Wednesday, November, 12, election day, are entitled to vote at the advance poll.

Fifty thousand ballots for the mayoralty, aldermanic, and school board contests are being printed and will be delivered early Friday.

The 39 city polling divisions have been split into 142 sub-polls for the convenience of the electors, and will be manned by approximately 300 deputy returning officers and poll clerks.

Last year at the advance poll 60 votes were cast.

LONDON, Nov. 6.—(CP)—Russia, fighting "a war of liberation alone against Germany" and her allies, is handicapped by lack of a second European front, but "the assistance given by Great Britain and the United States is of great importance and growing continually," Premier Joseph Stalin declared today in an address over the Moscow radio.

German losses since the invasion of Russia last June 22, have reached 4,500,000 men, dead, wounded and captured, Stalin said, and "if the Germans want a war of destruction, they will certainly get it."

Speaking on the eve of the 24th anniversary of the Bolshevik revolution, Stalin said slaughter and plunder were the Hitler policy, and therefore "The policy of the Red army is to destroy the Germans to the very last man."

READY FOR COLLAPSE

Mentioning in passing that the French government had sold out to Hitler for fear of a revolution, Stalin said, "only the Hitlerite madmen can think they can build a new order under the present conditions in Europe.

"The new order is ready to collapse at any moment and bury Hitler in its ruins."

Stalin said Soviet losses were 350,000 killed and 1,358,000 wounded or missing.

He said the Soviet rear never had been so strong as at this moment and that Red army morale was infinitely higher than that of the German army.

The German army has been forced to construct new bases on unfriendly territory, whereas "Our army is fighting on its own territory," the Russian premier asserted, "with our people exerting every effort to keep it supplied."

BLITZKRIEG FAILS

"It is unnecessary to add that the blitzkrieg has failed," he said.

"One of the chief factors facing the Red army at the present moment is the lack of a second front in Europe."

Stalin continued: "Feeling assured that they would not be attacked on the western front, the Germans are throwing in the bulk of their forces in the east.

"Our country is carrying on a war of liberation alone against the Germans, Hungarians and Italians."

He declared that "another reason for the temporary Red army setbacks is the shortage of tanks."

AVIATION SUPERIOR

"It cannot be said that our tank industry is not working well, it is working very well for its size, but the Germans can throw in more tanks, as they have not only their own factories but also the factories of Czecho-Slovakia, France and the countries of Europe which they occupy," he declared.

"Our aviation is superior in quality; our pilots have proved themselves. We have fewer planes, but the quality of our tanks and planes is superior."

He called Hitlerism "the replica of reactionary regimes which have existed throughout the centuries.

"It is a party of robbery, reaction and obstructionism.

HITLER'S INSTRUCTIONS

"Hitler's instructions to his people are: if we can only achieve our aims by killing and plunder, we

Military Service Related To Industry Requirements

Reconditioning Of Men Rejected As Unfit For Army Duties Is Studied

OTTAWA, Nov. 6.—(CP)—War Services Minister Thorson told the House of Commons Wednesday that recent changes in compulsory recruiting regulations imposed "very heavy obligations" on divisional war services boards. The changes enabled the boards to relate military service in a proper way to the manpower needs of war industries, farming and other essential activities.

A total of 43,309 applications for postponement of compulsory military service had been received and 28,813 granted. Farmers represented 19,186 of these applications and postponements were granted to 10,046 of the farm applicants.

Up to Oct. 1, 1941, said Mr. Thorson, only about 56 per cent of the men called for medical examination were placed in category "A."

"This revealed a somewhat serious situation," he said, "and plans for reconditioning these men who were rejected are under consideration by an inter-departmental committee."

TRY TO RECONDITION

If it were possible to recondition them, he assured the house every effort would be made to do so.

In answer to a question, Pensions Minister Mackenzie interjected that 900,000 men out of 2,000,000 have been rejected in the United States and 200,000 of the rejected are to be reconditioned.

A total of 123,457 men had been called up for training, Mr. Thorson reported. Of this number 94,582 were called under the original 30-day scheme and 28,605 under the present four-month plan.

NUMBER TRAINED

A total of 113,524 had reported for training and of these 10,000 were rejected for medical reasons.

A total of 1,102 who reported late were accepted. Allowing for those rejected the number trained in the first nine calls was 104,626.

The minister said 600 women had been enlisted for the Canadian Women's Army Corps. Recruiting for the C.W.A.C. and Canadian Women's Auxiliary Air Force was a responsibility of his department. More than 5,000 applications from women were on file in the department. It was proposed to build up a large reserve of women who were physically fit and available for service as required.

Women are playing a large part in the war, not only in these auxiliary services but in war industries.

FIRE FIGHTING FORCE

The department had recently undertaken organization of the Canadian overseas fire fighting force and it was planned to send men to Britain shortly.

The office of the director of public information (G. H. Lash) was active in distributing news and informative material.

He had come to the conclusion it would be a mistake to consolidate the publicity branches of different departments of government under one head. Instead it was decided to set up an inter-departmental committee representative of the different departments to bring about co-operation in the furtherance of the war effort and in bringing various phases of the war effort to the attion of the public.

One of the most popular publications of the public information branch had been a leaflet to familiarize Canadians going to the United States with Canada's war effort.

Methods of giving the United States additional information were under review. Consideration also was being given to expansion of the public information program by possible establishment of a speakers' bureau and publication of information in foreign languages for new Canadians.

He gave a review of the CBC's war activities and said it "plays an increasingly important part in furthering the war effort and plans are under way for further co-operation between the CBC and the Bureau of Public Information."

FILM BOARD

Mr. Thorson said he spoke of the activities of the National Film board "with great joy and great pride." Its work was reaching people in every part of the world not dominated by the Nazis.

In connection with war charities Mr. Thorson said he would suggest consolidation of effort from now on rather than an expansion in the number of active organizations.

At present 1,213 central funds and 852 branch funds were operating. To March 31 last, contributions totalling $27,000,000 had been recorded.

The salvage campaign conducted under his department had been an outstanding success in some localities and needed to be increased.

He said he was "not entirely satisfied with the Canadian Travel Bureau." However, this year tourist business had improved, and up to the beginning of November 11,000,000 tourists had entered Canada, an increase of 286,000 over last year.

will kill and plunder. No moral reasons restrain Hitler.

"Hitler tells his people that if his imperialistic plans are to be successful, they must crush the Soviet people."

Stalin said, "This is a just war which should be supported by all freedom-loving peoples.

"We do not aim at conquering other territory. Our first aim is to free our own territory.

"Our second aim is to free the enslaved peoples of Europe and then allow them to decide their own fate without any outside interference in their internal affairs.

"In order to achieve victory, our own people must work as they never have worked before to produce armaments. Our collective farmers must also play their parts.

"Only by smashing the German invader can we achieve a lasting peace."

"VICTORY WILL BE OURS"

He concluded: "We are for the deliverance of all oppressed peoples from Hitler's tyranny.

"Long live the unshakeable unity of the Soviet people.

"Long live our Red Army.

"Long live our Red Fleet.

"Long live our native land.

"Our cause is just; victory will be ours."

The Soviet news agency said Stalin's speech was before the supreme Soviet, which elected the following as members of the presidium, the highest Russian governing body:

Stalin, Foreign Commissar Molotov, Marshal Voroshilov, Lazar M. Kaganovich, Michael I. Kalinin president of the U.S.S.R., Andreyev, Anastas I. Mikoyan, Andre A. Zhdanov, N. S. Khrushchev, L. P. Beria, N. M. Shvernik, G. M. Malenkov, A. S. Schkerbakov, N. A. Voznesensky, and Kachanov.

Stalin's opening words were made unintelligible by interference which listeners in London ascribed to the German radio.

Russ Forces Split Moscow Siege Lines

that the 18th Chinese (Communist) field army had promised 100,000 Chinese troops to aid Russia against Germany and that they were "about to be transported westward."

Tass, the Russian news agency, said the Germans had fallen back with heavy losses at several points around Moscow.

There was no immediate indication whether the Russians had launched a major counter-offensive, but Tass reported that Red cavalry and infantry had made a series of attacks and that German forces at a point identified as "Kh" had been circled.

SMASH TANK ASSAULT

"On the left flank of the western (Moscow) front, the Red army is continuing to push the enemy back for the fourth day and continues to annihilate its rearguard without mercy," Tass said.

The Mozhaisk sector, 57 miles west of Moscow, Tass reported that a mass assault by Nazi tanks had been shattered by Red artillery fire.

Altogether, the picture was among the brightest yet painted for Russia's defence armies.

Even in the Crimea latest advices reaching London indicated the Germans had made little progress toward the Black Sea naval base of Sevastopol since last Sunday, when they were reported only 20 miles away.

A British military observer went so far as to declare Sevastopol might withstand siege indefinitely, reporting that the city of 80,000 was defended by well-supplied troops manning "very strongly fortified positions."

He said the stronghold could become "another Odessa, perhaps with not the same results"—referring to the long defence of the Ukraine mainland port against German and Rumanian siege armies. Odessa finally was evacuated in mid-October.

HITLER'S CLAIMS

Hitler's field headquarters claimed pursuit of "the beaten enemy" continued along the entire Crimean front and asserted that Soviet resistance had been broken in the mountains east of Sevastopol.

Reiterating yesterday's claim of a break-through to the Black Sea, the high command said German and Rumanian troops defeated isolated Red army units in the Yaila mountains and "pushed" through a broad front" to the coastal region between Yalta and Feodosiya.

On the central front, authoritative London quarters said the 36-day-old German drive on Moscow now was "very definitely held."

German newsreels from the front significantly stressed the hazards and difficulties of assaulting the U.S.S.R. capital, displaying diagrams and pictures of Moscow's five-ply outer defence system—successive barriers of flame-throwers, tank traps and barbed wire, a moat, more tank traps and barbed-wire entanglements, and finally bunkers.

BATTLES AT ROSTOV

The government-controlled Moscow radio said the Germans were fleeing from an unspecified Donets river battlefield "leaving behind them heaps of dead and many guns." Much of the bitterest fighting in the 60-mile-long basin has centred about Rostov-On-Don, gateway to the Caucasus oil fields.

Mine Victim's Body Will Rest In Native Land

CALGARY, Nov. 6.—(CP)—Anton Hoffman, 39, who fought for Germany in the first Great War, came to Canada to work in the coal mines and became an ardent supporter of the British cause in this war, violently anti-Nazi, will be buried in his native Czecho-Slovakia when this war is over.

Anton died with 28 companions in last week's disaster at the Brazeau coal mine at Nordegg. His badly-burned body was dug from the debris Tuesday and now lies in a funeral home in Calgary.

Born in Czecho-Slovakia in 1902, Hoffman served with the German forces when a boy of 15 in the first Great War. After the Armistice, he migrated to Canada in the early 20's, and became a coal miner.

SUPPORTED WAR EFFORT

For 20 years he worked industriously in the Alberta fields, the last ten years at Nordegg. He amassed a bank account of $4,000, gave liberally to the Red Cross and bought War Savings Certificates.

He actively supported every drive for funds to help the Empire in this war, pledging his earnings to the war effort.

It was Hoffman's wish that when he died he would be buried in his native land. His brother, Ignatz, also a Nordegg miner, will see that Anton's wish is granted. Their aged mother still lives in the little country that Hitler's Nazis now rule.

Report Il Duce Hit By Revolver Shots

LONDON, Nov. 6.—(CP)—Exchange Telegraph today quoted a Moscow report as saying that Mussolini had been slightly hurt by two revolver shots and that the German Gestapo had reinforced its Italian forces.

There was no indication in the dispatch when or by whom the shots were fired.

It was recalled however that the Fascist chief has been shot before and that a small dent was made at the end of his nose by one apparent would-be assassin several years ago.

Other news agencies, seeking to check the rumor, received no immediate confirmation.

(In Rome the rumor was denied and called "an invention." It was stated in Rome that a similar report was denied two days ago and that since then Mussolini has received several persons at his office.)

Today's War Moves

dramatic aerial dash to Washington on such short notice is revealing. What's the rush? The answer is that Kurusu's arrival will coincide with the meeting of the Japanese Diet.

His presence in Washington can be used as a damper on hotheads who might blow the lid off prematurely. They will be asked to show restraint so as not to jeopardize the negotiations, which Japan is anxious to see go through.

STUMBLING BLOCKS

The chief stumbling blocks are Japan's war against China and her desire for Asiatic hegemony. Washington's pledges for the salvation of China are too binding to go back on, while the United States is unalterably opposed to Japanese domination of "greater Asia." The nature of the proposals being brought by Kurusu has not been announced, but Washington observers have forecast their general tenor.

Japan is expected to offer to call off the China war in a settlement arranged by the good offices of the United States, but not on the basis of a Chinese victory. Japan will want a special sphere of influence in north China and inner Mongolia. To that the United States is extremely unlikely to agree.

Japan also may offer guarantees that she will not attack the Netherlands Indies, Thailand or Russia, and a limited but not irrevocable pledge that she will not enter the war on the side of the Axis.

JAPAN'S REQUESTS

In return, Tokyo will ask the United States to call off the economic warfare which she has been waging against Japan, to the latter's extreme discomfort. Finally, Japan will seek the right to organize an economic bloc of oriental nations, with the rights of third powers guaranteed.

That last may be regarded by Washington as a euphemism for Japanese hegemony, in which case it would be rejected. Hence Washington expects the negotiations to strike a snag on the two main issues at stake.

Interpreting War News

By KIRKE L. SIMPSON
Associated Press Staff Writer

THE Moscow announcement that the German drive on that city has been stopped dead strengthens the feeling that the Nazis will dig in for the winter there and confine themselves to holding operations.

But on the south flank of the long battle line things may be far differen . The Germans claim they have effected another break-through into the Crimea and have cut their foe into three segments for progressive annihilation.

Such menacing developments are forcing Britain, Russia's ally, to what may prove her most critical decision of the war. Somewhere British empire troops soon must strike back at Axis foes in a more effective counter offensive than sustained British air bombing in the west has proved.

DIFFICULT SECTOR

British prestige demands it, at home and abroad. Yet Nazi initiative at the south end of the Russian battle line, threatening an early sweep into the Caucasus, is all but stripping the high command in London of any choice as to where that clash is to come.

If it comes in the Caucasus, unquestionably it will be in the most difficult sector of the war front for the British to reach in adequate force and with secure communication lines. Via the submarine and bomber-haunted Mediterranean it is 4,000 miles from London to the Iran gateway to the Caucasus and its oil treasures. Via the Cape of Good Hope and the Persian Gulf, the route is 12,000 miles.

London military comment suggests that another British surge westward from Egypt against Italian Libya still offers a logical alternative to meeting the German threat to the Caucasus. That may have been true before Nazi forces had smashed through Russian defences in the Crimea, broken into the Donets Basin along a wide front and closely ringed with steel the Rostov portal of the Lower Don gateway. It does not seem equally true now.

NEGLIGIBLE ELEMENT

From Crimean bases Nazi bombers are likely to render Russia's naval strength in the Black Sea an almost negligible element in the fight to defend the Caucasus unless British air power is thrown heavily into action there. The Russians in the Crimea still have an uncertain hold on the slender Kerch peninsula, which juts eastward to close proximity with the Caucasus shores of Kerch Strait. But the terrain has few natural obstacles to aid a die-hard defensive stand.

If Russian forces in the Crimea have been so depleted by casualties and evacuation as to be unable to hold the passes of the steep Yaila mountains, as the Germans contend, their ability to hold the Kerch promontory is more than questionable. And in German hands the promontory must soon prove a jumping off place for flanking invasion of the Caucasus.

Once across Kerch Strait in force, the Germans would have turned the Rostov corner and the Don defence line from the rear. It might well result in splitting clear apart the Russian armies in the Caucasus and those now apparently falling back under pressure in the Don-Donets basin toward the Volga. It is obvious that only powerful British support for Russian armies trapped in the southern Caucasus can make Russia's rich Caspian oil fields safe from German capture.

All Victims Now Taken From Mine

Exclusive to Edmonton Bulletin

NORDEGG, Alta., Nov. 6. — Bodies of all the victims of the explosion which took the lives of 29 men in the Brazeau Collieries, Ltd., No. 3 mine, last Friday, have been recovered.

The last three were brought from the shaft Thursday morning by rescue workers who have toiled in continuous shifts to clear the masses of rock and coal which entombed the miners.

They were P. Meroi, Will Phillips and P. Difano (previously reported as Befano). Funeral arrangements for the men have not been completed.

The body of Anton (Tony) Hoffman was recovered Wednesday and shipped to Calgary for commitment in a mausoleum. After the war the remains will be taken to his native Czechoslovakia for burial.

100,000 Will Benefit From Farmer Bonus

Fully 100,000 Alberta farmers are expected to benefit from the most recent Dominion government bonus, described as the "Prairie Farm Income Payment," according to W. C. Barrie, provincial director of the wheat acreage reduction plan. Applications for this bonus must be made not later than Nov. 30. This bonus is payable to those who reduced their wheat acreage and then due to weather conditions had a poor crop.

Payments will be made in two instalments. The first, including up to 60 per cent of the total, will be made as soon as possible after Dec. 1 and the other 40 per cent will be paid sometime after March 1 next.

Although the total amount likely to be paid to the 100,000 Alberta farmers is not available, a recent Ottawa estimate was that about $20,000,000 would be paid out to the farmers of the three prairie provinces.

BASIS FOR PAYMENT

Basis for payment of the bonus is 75 cents an acre on one-half of the cultivated acreage, the maximum payment to each farmer not to exceed $150. This payment is to be made over and above the wheat acreage reduction bonus and those ordinarily paid under the Prairie Farm Assistance Act. Moreover, payments will be made to all farmers, save ranchers, market gardeners or those farmers who are not living on or near their farms.

"Farmers who have filed a cultivated acreage report for 1941 under the P.F.A.A. need not file a further statement," said Mr. Barrie. "Farmers who have not filed such cultivated acreage report but who have made a sworn wheat acreage reduction claim must complete a cultivated acreage report under the P.F.A.A. Those who have not filed a cultivated acreage report or a wheat reduction claim must complete a cultivated acreage report under oath."

Bracken May Be Chosen Leader Of Tory Party

declared an unwillingness to accept the leadership himself under any conditions—health being the reason given—but will agree to enter Commons and serve as Bracken's lieutenant if the Manitoba premier will enter the field.

Mr. Bracken has been premier of Manitoba since 1922. In his career he has been both Progressive and Liberal, but recently has divested himself of any party label and formed a union government. That the appeal Conservatives are making to him now is not a party appeal goes without saying. Instead, these quarters say, it was made on grounds of an opportunity to serve the war effort.

The question inevitably arising relates to the willingness of the Conservative party to accept Bracken's leadership—in event he himself is willing to take it over.

Tomorrow's gathering has been called to name the place and date for the Conservative national convention and nothing else, however.

McPHERSON NONCOMMITAL

Though the majority of M.P.'s appear in favor of choosing Meighen for leadership at this meeting, there is no indication what the views of the delegates from the provinces will be. Ontario and Quebec each are sending fourteen while the others are sending eight each, and all provincial Conservative leaders have been invited.

Murdock McPherson, of Regina, whose name has been prominently mentioned for leadership now is en route to Ottawa. At Winnipeg he was asked recently if he would contend for the leadership and replied:

"Sufficient for the day is the evil thereof."

OTTAWA, Nov. 6.—(CP)—A caucus of Conservative members of the House of Commons today appointed Gordon Grayson (Con-Peel) as press liason officer for the meeting of the Dominion Conservative Association executive which opens here tomorrow.

Party spokesmen said they had no further statement to make on the caucus and that the program for the executive meeting is only tentative so far.

About 150 delegates are expected to attend tomorrow's session in the railway committee room of the House of Commons.

Daily Express Pays Tribute To U.S. Seamen

LONDON, Nov. 6. — (CP) — The Daily Express published today a black-bordered list of men lost in the sinking of the United States destroyer Reuben James.

British and American flags were at the upper corners and at the bottom, in italics, was Abraham Lincoln's reference to "These Honored Dead" in his Gettysburg address.

"Britain honors these men," said the newspaper. "Britain honors their brothers of the U.S. naval and merchant fleets who share with our men the perils of the Atlantic."

Allowance To Soldiers' Kin Termed Cheap

By HAROLD FAIR

LONDON, Nov. 6.—(CP)—Government plans for increased allowances to servicemen's families drew bitter comment in the House of Commons from members of all parties who denounced the proposal as an inadequate compromise with the demand for a flat-rate boost in service pay and allowances.

"Running the services on the cheap," "creating the dole mind," "form-filling nightmare" were among the epithets hurled at the scheme in the debate following Pensions Minister Sir Walter Womersley's exposition of the new plan which takes the form of an extension and revision of the existing war service grants.

The scheme, which became effective Nov. 1, is concerned with grants made to dependents in cases of proved hardship by the War Service Grants Advisory Committee and not with the ordinary dependents' allowances which are paid automatically and without test by the service departments.

MAXIMUM GRANT

Under the new plan the maximum supplementary grant will be raised from £2 (about $9) to £3 (about $13.50) a week. Subject to this maximum, there is a guarantee of 16 shillings minimum income per family unit—two children under school age or one adult counting as a unit. Moreover the government will make up the income per unit to as much as 20 shillings (about $4.50) per unit where it can be shown that the "pre-service" family income was on such a scale.

Income per unit, calculated after allowing for such fixed charges as rent, insurance and taxes, is compared with the old-scale income of 15 shillings (about $3.20) per unit, each child counting as half a unit.

Where "pre-service" income was more than 20 shillings per family unit, the attempt to maintain the pre-service standard will not be made, although grants may still be given in special cases on the old discretionary principle.

ILLUSTRATES

Illustrating the scheme, Sir Walter used as example a woman with six children whose husband's "pre-service" income had been small. The wife drew from the service £2, 14s, (about $12.08) a week. After paying rent, taxes, amounting to about £1 (about $4.50) she had only £1, 14s, (about $7.58) to keep her and the children.

Under the new scheme she was guaranteed a minimum of 16 shillings per unit so that altogether she would receive for herself and six children a guaranteed sum of £3, 4s (about $14.38) a week after all commitments had been met.

Japs Protest Ship Sunk By Russian Mine

TOKYO, Nov. 6.—(AP) — The foreign office announced today it had lodged a protest with Russia over the sinking last night of the Japanese steamer Kebi Maru, charging its loss to a mine which had drifted from Soviet territorial waters.

A prompt reply was demanded.

Domei at the same time said there were 17 dead and 10 seriously injured among the first 264 persons picked up by rescue vessels which speeded to the scene of the sinking in the Sea of Japan off the Korean coast.

CALL RUSS ENVOY

Domei earlier had reported all 342 passengers and most of the 65 crew members aboard the 4,522-ton steamer had been rescued.

The Kebi Maru went down within 30 minutes after the blast, which occurred about 130 miles at sea on her journey from Seishin, Korea, to Tsuruga, western Japanese port.

The foreign office requested Constantin Smetanin, Russian ambassador to Tokyo, to call this afternoon and it was understood the government then lodged its protest.

It was recalled that on Sept. 18 the Japanese government filed a protest in Moscow against floating mines in the Sea of Japan which it said had sunk one fishing vessel and damaged another causing a number of deaths.

SOVIET GAVE WARNING

As early as Sept. 18 the government had announced it had picked up a number of mines in Japanese waters or on the high seas which Japanese officials asserted were Russian.

It was suggested most of these mines were swept from Vladivostok harbor by storms since Russia had broadcast alarms in July about the danger of floating mines in the Sea of Japan.

Youth Jumps From Vancouver Bridge

VANCOUVER, Nov. 6.—(CP)—Police said Wednesday night that a young man who jumped to his death yesterday from the First Narrows bridge, crossing Vancouver's harbor entrance, had been identified from a photograph as David Kilby, 25, by Bridge Attendant J. C. Turner.

The youth's father, David Kilby, Sr., said his son had been out of work for some time but could give no reason for his action.

Turner said the young man made the 210-foot leap to the water from the giant bridge after being noticed by bridge guards who told him to move on.

Signalmen on the bridge said the youth hit the water with a terrific splash. He reappeared on the surface, and swam around "for about three minutes" before disappearing again beneath the swirling waters. No boats were nearby at the time.

The signalman said he was the seventh person to jump from the bridge since it was constructed about four years ago.

ferences between the senior governments.

At the moment the old age pension plan stands like this:

If you are a British subject, if you have attained the age of 70 years and have resided in Canada for five years, if you do not receive an income of $365 per year, you many apply for the old age pension, with its maximum rate of $20 per month. The Dominion government pays 75 per cent., the provincial government 15 per cent., and the city contributes 10 per cent. Thus, you can readily see the city's interest is small—just as influence would be small, in trying to promote increased pensions from the senior governments.

ARDUOUS TASK

When a proposal was made to council that we petition the senior governments for an increase from $20 to $30 per month I felt that it would be a long and arduous task to produce results.

I feel that the present old age pension is hopelessly small and that we cannot wait for months, perhaps years, to remedy the situation! Those who are suffering now from a low pension, plus the increased cost of living should have immediate relief.

Therefore I supported—and will continue to support—a resolution urging our federal government to have the cost-of-living bonus apply to old-age pensions.

Those men and women who now receive old age pensions are the citizens who are most seriously hurt by the increased cost-of-living—which is now attained at 15 points above the pre-war cost!

What would the cost-of-living bonus mean, you ask? It would mean that each person receiving the old age pension would receive $3.75 per week more than he receives at the present time . . . a maximum of $35 per month—not $30. And these men and women would have that extra money now—when they need it!

Then, too, under such a plan, if the cost-of-living rises—so will the old age pension, and our responsibility to these men and women would be taken care of immediately. This stand is one which I am prepared to follow until a successful conclusion . . . and I do urge that each one of you consider it carefully—whether or not you are directly affected by it!

INSISTENT DEMAND

Mayor John W. Fry (Independent Mayoralty): After long and careful consideration as to whether I should again contest the mayoralty I decided to do so because of the insistent demand of so many of my friends and supporters who urge me to give the citizens the opportunity of making the decision by their ballot as to whether I should be mayor again or not. The decision is now yours to make and I shall be glad to abide by that decision.

My record during the past four years as mayor has been such that I can confidently ask for a renewal of your support. I stand or fall by that record. It is known to you all.

GETS CO-OPERATION

May I, however, be permitted to review some of the highlights briefly and in so doing I would not for a moment suggest to you that the credit for the city's financial and other advancement has been entirely due to my own efforts. I have always freely given credit for the fine spirit of co-operation of the members of the city council and also stressed the invaluable assistance given by my fellow commissioners, Mr. Gibb and Mr. Hodgson, as well as the superintendents and staffs of the various departments.

During my regime the taxpayers have been benefitted by a reduction in the mill rate from 55 mills to 51.5, in spite of the fact that we have had to struggle with a bank overdraft of nearly two million dollars, which has now been reduced to $250,000, and when this is finally wiped out in the near future those revenues may go towards reducing our general debt.

There was a marked upsurge in the rate of building in our city. Many fine new stores and offices have transformed the downtown section and given much needed employment to our artisans and added materially to our tax assessment rolls.

Our home building program, while it is not all that could be desired, has been a splendid one. During the past two years almost one thousand new homes have been built in this city. This is a marvelous record when one considers that no outside help has been available either through the National Housing act or through loans from financial institutions.

Our public utilities have been largely rehabilitated and extended. Trolley busses have been introduced as well as some Diesel busses for feeder lines, but this program has been somewhat interrupted because of the inability to get deliveries, due of course to the fact that war necessities must receive first consideration.

During my regime the telephone system has been rehabilitated and provision for 600 new telephone outlets on the north and south exchanges effected. Orders for equipment for further extension have been placed.

POWER PLANT

A new $750,000 addition to the power plant was completed shortly after my inauguration, and work on a similar addition is now proceeding rapidly and it is anticipated this will be completed early in the spring. This will make our power plant one of the largest and most up to date steam units in all of Canada.

During my period of office a program of paving, gravelling, sidewalk construction, oiling for dust nuisance and maintenance program has been financed out of a revenue averaging $700,000 per annum as compared with $150,000 in 1926.

Now a few words as to our relations with our employees. I have always believed that it is the duty of any government or civic administration to set an example for fair and just treatment to those who serve us so willingly and efficiently, so that they may be able to maintain a reasonable standard of living; that their positions should be secure as long as they are giving efficient service and that their old age should be provided for insofar as it lies within our power reasonably to do. That end and due to the improved financial position of the city we have striven to restore the wages that were in effect in the days of the depression began. This we have been successful in doing.

It has been a source of pride to me that during my regime we have been able to introduce a pension plan throughout the city service, and while this pension cannot as yet be considered adequate, it is undoubtedly of very great assistance to our aged employees and is a source of gratitude come to me from those who benefit thereby.

The growing need for a sewer system in the Rundle street area was realized, and a $75,000 extension to the sewer system is now underway.

MUST INSPIRE PEOPLE

J. W. Adair, (Independent, aldermanic): We must inspire the people of Edmonton with their duty and responsibility as the makers of municipal governments. The municipal government touches the very life of the people. It provides the services so essential for the people's well-being, and yet in municipal elections the greatest apathy prevails in contrast to the interest shown in provincial and federal elections.

Public utilities are a sample of what achievement which can be accomplished through awakened responsibility in the electors. There was none the need to awaken municipal election interest when the city acquired these utilities, and no true progress will be made in Edmonton until the electors regain that interest. These magnificent contributions to Edmonton's welfare are only a part of what can be accomplished here through the awakening of municipal consciousness.

H. D. Ainlay (Canadian Labor Party, aldermanic): We are faced with the problem of arousing greater interest among the voters or else we will be facing a grave situation. Lack of exercising the franchise means a pyramiding of power which leads to dictatorship.

I served on the aldermanic board during four of the gravest years of the city's history, when the relief situation was at its peak. With the council drawing funds from the sinking fund the last four or five years have been very pleasant to the council.

DISPENSE WITH BOARD

I would ask for immediate dispensing of the sinking fund board as the fund has now reached such a low level that its services are no longer needed.

The council has been playing around with the taxes of the city. The taxation system is outdated. The home pocketbook is the issue, yet it is taxed. The taxes have to be revised so that they be paid out of the income which, after all, is the yard stick which guides the man's ability to pay.

In regard to utilities, I am in favor of gradual reduction of utilities rates in order that the ones who helped to build up the surpluses may gradually benefit from their efforts.

M. M. Case (Citizens' Committee, aldermanic): I have been asked by the Citizens' Committee to be an aldermanic candidate. In asking me to be the committee's candidate, it was stressed that there was need for a man on city council with merchandizing experience. I was honored by being included on the Citizens' slate and deemed it my duty to serve Edmonton, a city that has been kind to me and my family during my 29 years' residence here.

I appeal for support of the Citizens' Committee and on election day, and promise to give my best judgment to all matters of civic business and to do my duty as my common-sense directs.

Mrs. Gwendolen Clarke (Civic Progressive Association, aldermanic): I am simply a homemaker representing the city's homemakers in the election. In British Columbia five women were elected to the legislature and that is not too many. I feel that five women on the city council would not be too many.

Home problems and housing are the two main points that would receive my attention if elected. Provision should be made to enable more people to build low-priced homes. A proposition by the Dominion government whereby pre-fabricated homes could be erected should be looked into.

I am in favor of a cost-of-living bonus to returned men and wives of men on service.

CUT IN UTILITIES

Miss Margaret Crang, (Civic Progressive Association, aldermanic): As I did when I previously represented you as alderman, I will continue to work for reduction in utilities rates. Utilities profits should go back to the people in the form of reduced rates.

Reduction of street car fare to five cents was good business. Figures show that the amount of revenue from car fares had increased even though the rate was reduced.

The cost of living has gone up about 15 per cent. and civic employees, war dependents and civic dependents should receive bonuses to meet the rise.

If elected I would advocate that delegates be sent to Ottawa to ask for more war industries for Edmonton. At present we are not getting the amount we should be getting.

It is true that the council passed a resolution to advocate for increased old-age pensions allowances, but there is fear that nothing more will be done about it. Edmonton pays 10 per cent. of the money and therefore should have something to say about the matter.

Amount of pension should be increased from $20 to $30 and the age for eligibility should be lowered from 70 to 65.

J. M. Douglas (Citizens' Committee, aldermanic): Although a South Side candidate in this election I take as deep an interest in the welfare of Calder and I do in the immediate neighborhood in which I live, and while I was mayor of the city I was accused of not doing enough for the South Side. I deem it my duty to look to the interests of all citizens rather than any particular section.

I was honored by being selected by the Citizens' Committee as an aldermanic candidate. The slate is composed of men from all walks in life, thus giving representation on it to a perfect cross-section of the worker, industrial and business life of the city.

Continuing as aldermen on the aldermanic board are Aldermen Sidney Parsons and Sidney Bowcott, recognized leaders on organized labor in Edmonton. This year another labor man, Albert Knowler, was included on the slate to replace Ald. Lt.-Col. E. Brown, thus giving organized labor a representation of three in the 10-man aldermanic board.

We are facing a serious situation. The present council has had a snap. There has been no outside borrowing to be done, as money for improvements was available from the sinking fund through the Forest Lawn plan. The problem of the few years will be financing the city's business, and it is necessary to have men on council that can face these problems and achieve results. I have been an alderman of the city of Edmonton, its mayor, and also an alderman of the Strathcona Council prior to amalgamation. The experience gained in these offices fits me for the task ahead.

BIG INTERESTS?

At the conclusion of Mr. Douglas' speech a woman in the audience asked him if it was not a fact that the Citizens' Committee was representing big eastern business interests. Mr. Douglas replied that the Committee was composed of a large number of Edmonton business men who endeavored to render public service by selecting capable men and women and seeking their election to ensure good municipal government. "I doubt it," commented the questioner as Mr. Douglas completed his answer.

C. E. Gariepy, (Citizens' Committee, aldermanic): Appealing for re-election I want to thank the electors for the splendid support they gave me last year. During that year I have endeavored to give faithful service to all citizens of Edmonton. Essential services must be carried on to the limit of the city's capacity to meet the bill, and more adequate transportation facilities should be provided for the Calder district to meet the increasing population which followed the development of war industry in this district.

When the addition to the Aircraft Assembly plant was completed and 2,500 men were employed there the need for greater transportation facilities will be imperative. This was a matter which has received consideration from the transportation committee.

MILL RATE LOWERED

Profits from the public utilities have been instrumental in lowering the mill rate. The deficit from the street railway operations were absorbed by the other utilities. Reduction in the utility rates will be followed by increased mill rate and in consequence many home-owners now paying taxes with the greatest difficulty may lose their homes.

Return to the mayoralty and city council men with the city's interests at heart, men who will give careful, business-like government and who will aggressively seek the betterment of Edmonton. I appeal for the return of the entire Citizens' Committee slate on election day.

Louis D. Hyndman, K.C., (Citizens' Committee), public school board: While I am a newcomer to civic politics, and have never before sought public office, nevertheless I have for years past been interested in public affairs. I now seek the vote of the citizens of Edmonton as a public school trustee, and if you believe that I possess some talents that may contribute to the administration of the school board, then I will appreciate your vote.

It is fortunate that a contest for the school board should be held this year. For two years past, public apathy has permitted the board to be elected by acclamation. That is not in the best interests of the city. It is the very essence of democracy that there should be a free and intelligent expression of opinion among the electorate. To that end our educational system must be in large measure directed.

Education today is not merely a matter of learning general knowledge and ultimately mastering some special subject matter to enable an individual to earn his living in the world. It is far more than an intellectual exercise. Education should be developed as a means to a better mode of living, as a protection to our society against the possible inroads of Fascism, Nazism or Communism. Education today must be directed to creating future citizens who will be intelligent enough to safeguard institutions of democracy. In the administrative and teaching staffs of the city schools, there are to be found many forward-looking and sincere workers genuinely interested in the progress of their students, and I am convinced they are deeply concerned to help these young people become intelligent, democratic citizens able to contribute their vast fund of energy to the reconstruction of a decent way of life.

AVAILABLE TO ALL

As I see the function of the school board, it is to administer the city schools so that this type of education may be freely available to every child and while much has been achieved in the advancement of the school system in Edmonton, much yet remains to be done.

The board should probe the possibilities of providing free text books to all school children. If from a financial point of view this cannot be done, at least some method should be devised to ease the burden of expense in the case of larger families. This is especially true with respect to high school children.

Daniel K. Knott (Independent, aldermanic): I was representative of the Citizens' Committee co-operating with labor on the city council for four years. This year the committee dropped one of the labor men to make room for a businessman. The great mass of Edmonton citizens are consumers who work for wages and not businessmen.

I have been carrying a trade union card for over 41 years and have fought for labor problems in civic capacities for many of those 41 years.

Labor men have been the connecting link between employees and the civic administration. Labor men have also been instrumental in swaying the balance of power in the House of Commons to pass legislation for pensions. They have advocated unemployment insurance for years.

A. E. Knowler (Citizens' Committee, aldermanic): I have been selected to take the place of Lt.-Col. Ald. E. Brown, who was compelled to resign from the committee's slate through pressure of his military duties. When Col. Brown found it impossible to contest the election the committee determined that another trade unionist should replace him. I am a trade unionist and an ex-service man. I would appeal to you for support of the Citizens' Committee slate on election day. Its candidates have given us good civic government and I am honored, as it the trade union movement, in being associated with citizens from other walks in life in affording the citizens that good government.

M. B. McColl, (Independent, aldermanic): During my two years on city council I have set out to accomplish two objectives—the employees' pension scheme, and a plan for the sale of low-priced city-owned lots to encourage home building. The pension plan was put into operation, and now all male civic employees can draw a pension on retiring from civic employment at 65 years of age. In the case of female employees the retiring age was set at 60.

This plan was vitally necessary due to the fact that without such a pension scheme our civic employees were in many cases kept on on the service long after they should have been retired. As a result positions which should have been filled with young men were being retained by men of 70 years or older, while the young men were walking the streets seeking work.

If elected to city council I will advocate vigorously a policy of setting aside a certain number of city-owned lots, priced high, and on which purchasers can build moderate priced homes. These lots should sell for about $50 each. They should be adjacent to our street car lines and on sewer, water and power lines.

Let us encourage the building of homes rather than the turning of present dwellings and buildings into suites and apartments. Let us get more of our vacant lots on the tax rolls again thereby lowering the taxes on present homes.

(He said he would not be in Edmonton on election day as he had received orders to report to Currie Barracks, Calgary, for a month's military training in connection with his duties as an officer of the Edmonton Regiment. He expressed the hope, however, that his absence from the city would not prevent the electors from knowing him, and recalled that at a previous election Ald. Sidney Parsons was elected although he was absent from the city throughout the entire campaign.)

W. H. O'Neill (Canadian Labor Party, aldermanic): If we analyze the situation closely we will find that the men who made the town have been played the suckers. I am referring to the labor men.

If you do not get out and vote in sufficient numbers to make a change then you will not have voted at all.

I was asked many times by workers to run for city council but my answer at all times was that they didn't like my kind up there. That is not my answer any longer. I am out for a fight. If I am elected you won't find me in the office smoking a cigar, nor in the bar having a glass of beer.

The pension situation has room for great improvement. Turn to New Zealand—their plan provides $50 monthly for all persons who have reached the required age.

DUTY OF TRUSTEES

A. E. Ottewell, (Citizens' Committee, public school board): It is the duty of the public school trustees to provide the best education for the children of Edmonton that the funds available can provide, but it must be remembered that the only source of these funds is from the taxpayer so that there is a limit to the services that can be rendered. Schools are not operated for the taxpayer, school board officials or the teachers. They are operated for the children and it is the duty of school trustees to provide the best schools, teachers and facilities within the capacity of the citizens to pay.

Miss Lois Patterson (on behalf of her father, Guy Patterson, K.C. Civic Progressive Association, aldermanic): I want to apologize for my father's absence from the meeting. He was detained in Vegreville on business.

My father has contested many civic elections when he knew there was little chance of success, but this year he is confident the tide is swinging toward the progressive-minded candidates. He is intimately acquainted with the problems of the low-bracket wage-earner and the worker generally. He has a large family, and we have had to practice the utmost care to make ends meet. Therefore he knows how to guard the civic dollars, to see that value is received for every penny spent.

I am confident that he will bring sound sense, and his thorough training as a lawyer to bear upon the conduct of civic business, as he has done in his private life. I appeal with confidence for your support for him and the Civic Progressive slate on election day.

READS PLATFORM

Alice Sheppard (Independent, aldermanic): In the limited time at my disposal I shall read to you my 15-point platform:

1—Full speed ahead to win the war.

2—Constant planning for re-establishing our men as they return from the war.

3—Increase in mothers' allowance; and old age pensions at 65.

4—A definite progressive home-building plan.

5—Rents shall not be increased.

6—City-owned buildings properly repaired before letting and brought up to health regulations.

MILK PRICES

7—Milk prices can be reduced by reducing distribution cost.

8—No increase in street railway or bus fares.

9—Gas rates must be lowered by 20 per cent.

10—Reduction in electric light, heating and power rates.

11—Part of utilities' profits earmarked for extensions of utilities to districts where warranted.

12—Health regulations more fully enforced.

13—Better lighting, sidewalks and drainage for outer zone.

14—No homes to be taken for taxes during the war.

15—Fullest co-operation with our governments in all war efforts and progressive matters.

R. L. Sutherland (Citizens' Committee, public school board): The work of the school board is not a small undertaking. Their expenditure amounts to about a million and a half a year.

During the last two years the board has been predominantly represented by members selected by the Citizens' Committee and their policy has been one of increased taxation and no increase in the debt. They have carried out this policy to a letter.

If elected again I will continue to do my bit to see that a similar policy is carried out.

J. E. Sydie, (Citizens' Committee, aldermanic): The successful government given Edmonton by the Citizens' Committee has been the result of splendid team work and it is essential that the new captain of the team be elected with the members to preserve that teamwork which has been so beneficial to Edmonton. Calder has problems that must be met in the near future, these are housing and transportation.

Our publicly-owned utilities have contributed large amounts to the city revenue, and helped tide us over the depression periods. They have been given a faithful hang of civic workers, who have been encouraged by the fixed policy of plant extension and improvement made in recent years. I am in entire agreement that lower utility rates should prevail, and would urge that they be lowered as rapidly as the financial position of the city will permit.

PROBLEMS OF WORKERS

William J. Tree, (Canadian Labor Party, public school board): Men of the Labor Party understand problems of the workers, and are therefore necessary on the school board.

The educating of children is the first consideration of the Labor Party. They are fully aware of the increasing demand for better qualifications in labor. Airmen and machinists require a much higher level of education today than they needed several years ago.

To meet this worth-while demand many working parents are putting their children through school at great sacrifices. Many of these need help. In some instances it is a case of clothing or books.

I am for all legislation that will make access to higher education as easy as possible for all. I also favor a cost-of-living bonus for teachers.

1942 Army Program Will Be Considered In Light Of Dominion's Manpower

OTTAWA, Nov. 6.—(CP)—Canada's army program for 1942 will be considered by the war committee of the cabinet in the light of a preliminary survey of the country's manpower, Defence Minister Ralston told the House of Commons Wednesday.

Fresh from a trip overseas to visit the Canadian Corps and British military leaders the minister said no corps in the United Kingdom is more completely organized as to corps and line-of-communication troops.

Replying directly to questions from Conservatives as to the objective of Canada's armed services, the minister said no top limit has been set. His answer was to quote Prime Minister Mackenzie King's words at the Lord Mayor's banquet in London: "Canada is determined to contribute to the utmost of her strength."

"That does not limit the number of divisions," he said. "You can not count that in divisions."

RECRUITING CAMPAIGN

The minister said the early summer recruiting campaign was a success but in the four months since then 24,000 men had been enlisted where 37,000 were asked.

Factors responsible were unexpected demands for more men for the air force and war industry and difficulty in convincing people the army needed men. To remedy the last condition he appealed for support from members of parliament and the public.

The minister spoke proudly of the voluntary response of Canadian men to the call to arms and said in six months 168,773 were enlisted in the navy, the active army and the air force.

"It seems to me that Canada's war activities are nothing to apologize for and nothing to deprecate," he said. "In men, in munitions and in money they constitute a tremendous effort and I want to assure the house that we shall keep right on."

The minister's summary of the results of voluntary enlistment came on the heels of an outline of the activities of the National War Services department including the compulsory calling of men to the army by War Services Minister Thorson.

Col. Ralston hadn't finished his speech when the house adjourned and he will continue today.

PRELIMINARY STUDY

"A preliminary study of the manpower situation in Canada has just been made," he said. "The chief of the general staff (Maj.-Gen. H. D. G. Crerar) and I have returned from England after consultations with the general officer commanding the corps (Lt.-Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton) and our friends in the United Kingdom.

"I have had no opportunity as yet to report to my colleagues. The war committee of the cabinet will be examining the situation thoroughly in the light of Canada's potentialities and in the light of the needs to determine what are the most effective ways in which the army can act, and in which the army program for 1942 can be developed as part of our war effort; and that, of course, will take account of the other calls on our resources of manpower and materials."

The minister said it was not correct to think of the Canadian Corps now in England as simply three divisions and an army tank brigade with an armored division to follow. There were more than 300 units of different types formed to serve the corps as a whole or any division or divisions which might be detached from the corps.

KNOW MEN'S JOB

"I am satisfied there is not in the United Kingdom a corps as complete in that respect as the Canadian Corps," he said.

"At the present time the Canadian Corps has developed almost from a corps to an army by reason of the line of communication troops and the corps troops which have been added to it."

Dealing with facts and figures the minister said more than 110,000 Canadian troops were outside Canada, not all in the United Kingdom; the corps included 50 per cent more troops than were in the Canadian Corps of 1915 to 1918; more than 42,000 men had moved overseas since March 11; the 5th (armored) division was soon to go.

With soldierly directness—he commanded a battalion in action in the First Great War—the minister declared the morale of Canadian troops in England is good, that they are keen and alert and with "good Canadian common sense," and know the importance of their job in the defence of Britain.

He said they were bucked up by recent big army manoeuvres and by the Canadian raid on Spitsbergen. He outlined lessons learned in the army manoeuvres as follows:

ARMY COMMUNICATIONS

"The first was the usefulness of the communications which have been provided by the army communications. When one realizes that communication has to be maintained between vehicles in columns miles and miles long on the tortuous roads in England, when orders are constantly being changed, and those changed orders have to be communicated to the driver of each vehicle, one realizes that it is a test both of the army communications themselves, and the men who operate them.

"It was a tremendous satisfaction to the officers with whom I talked to feel that those communications had stood the test, and that the men had stood the test under what were at that time abnormal circumstances. I believe the men, as a matter of fact, bivouacked out for the whole eight nights. They travelled about 400 miles altogether.

"Changed orders came from time to time. The column which had started for a particular point in the morning might be approached at 10 o'clock in the morning with verbal orders—they had no written orders—calling on them to go to some other point. That information had to be communicated all the way down the column, which stretched for miles and miles. Then, probably in another hour a despatch rider would rush up and deliver another verbal order indicating a change in destination to some other point.

FIND WAY ABOUT

"Those were two of the factors, namely communications, and the ability to find their way about. The Canadian battalion and Canadian units got to the places to which they were directed.

The third thing was the test with regard to the maintenance of vehicles.

"I do not know of any more important task in the modern army than the maintenance of vehicles. That was illustrated beyond doubt in those exercises. The men learned perhaps more than in any other way how important it was for the driver mechanic to go through the routine, night after night, with his vehicle, and to go over the number of things laid down in the book for him, in order that he may be sure his vehicle will start to operate next day.

"The vehicles stood the test remarkably well. I am not so sure that the tanks did as well as the transport vehicles. Nevertheless, all that experience was to the good. From the imperial officers in command I heard the most glowing references to the part which the Canadians played in the exercises.

WILL HOLD THE FORT

"I found this, that the men of the Canadian Corps—and I am not speaking of the bumper exercises, and not simply of the officers—in the line which is only about 40 miles away from the enemy, were themselves fully aware of what their job was, and how they were to do it. There seemed to be a disposition on the ground not only of an intention to do their part, but that each individual man would see to it that the fort was held.

"I want to say to the house that wires, services and guns are not the whole thing in connection with the defence of the island of England. They do not tell the whole story, by any means. Those men with strong bodies, clear heads and hearts of oak realize their responsibilities, and I have not any doubt but that there would be a warm reception prepared for Hitler, should he happen to make the invasion which has been threatened for so long."

The role of the army in this war was not a minor one, as some imagined. It was the army which enabled Hitler to over-run Europe. If invasion of Britain came it would be the task of the air force and the navy to delay it but of the army to repel it. The army was not being trained only for offensive warfare. Two-thirds of its training was for offensive fighting.

OFFENSIVE WARFARE

Defensive warfare in the morning might be offensive in the afternoon as counter attacks were launched on the continent or elsewhere. Canadian troops were equipped with tanks and Bren gun carriers for carrying on offensive warfare.

"With regard to tanks," said the minister, "we have or shall have, when the armored division goes over, four divisions altogether, three infantry divisions, plus one armored division plus one army tank brigade which is a third of a division.

"In other words we shall have one and one-third armored divisions which are essential for offensive warfare as against three infantry divisions.

"If my friend (Conservative leader Hanson) will look up the records with regard to the German army he will find that not more than one in 10 of the divisions are panzer divisions as compared with the ordinary infantry division.

"I do not want him or the country to get the idea the Canadian troops are being trained for defensive warfare in the sense that they are sitting down in a trench and waiting for the enemy to come."

In recruiting the army had to give away to the navy and the air force, said the minister.

ARMY NEEDS MEN

The army needed men for new units constantly being formed to keep pace with the developments of modern war and to replace those discharged for various reasons. It was just as important to provide men for replacements as to provide spare parts for guns and Bren gun carriers. Between 7,000 and 8,000 men a month were needed to take care of waste, provide for new units and build up reinforcements.

"Here is the situation as I see it," said the minister. "The government of Canada pledged to a full-out war effort, has authorized the mobilization of the 1st Division, the 2nd, 3rd, 4th and 5th divisions, and the brigade troops of the 6th division. In addition to that, thousands of corps and army troops have been authorized and raised.

"The first duty we have is to keep up and maintain these formations. I want to impress this on the house as I did over the radio a short time ago that this is not the job simply of the department of national defence, but it is a pledge given by the government of Canada in the name of the people of Canada, and it is the people of Canada themselves who have the obligation to see to it that the men in these units are backed up to the limit, and that the Canadian army which has been authorized is kept strong and reinforced.

DUTY OF CITIZENS

"That need has been put before the citizens of this Dominion more than once, but we have to repeat and repeat and repeat that the need is there.

"I want to say again with all the emphasis and with all the sincerity I can, that this is not a matter to be left simply to the department of national defence and civilian recruiting committees, but it is up to the members of this house and the people they represent to put their hearts and wills and energies to this task of convincing the young men of this Dominion that their place is in the Canadian army.

"We in the department of national defence will do our level best to help to organize that recruiting which is necessary. The problems are not the same in every part of Canada. In some districts we must deal with a population which is largely agricultural. In others our young men from the nature of their environment are more interested in serving in the naval service, for instance.

NUMBER OF DIVISIONS

"In other highly industrialized areas we have the special problem of co-operation which is necessary with industry so that we shall not denude our factories altogether of the skilled labor which is necessary for the continued production of armaments. Consequently recruiting efforts are decentralized to the various military districts throughout the country and, where possible, the district officer commanding is assisted by civilian committees."

In speaking of numbers of divisions, said the minister, some members did not appreciate the number there were, in addition to the corps and its corps troops overseas there were the 5th (armored) division and the 4th division in Canada. Three brigade groups for the 6th division were being mobilized and mobilization of five additional companies for the Forestry Corps to bring it up to 25 companies had been authorized.

In the air force were 90,000 men, the equivalent of four divisions, and the navy would soon have the equivalent of two divisions. There were also coast defence units and a reserve army of 150,000

Turks Claim Russ Sink Cargo Vessel

ISTANBUL, Turkey, Nov. 5—(Delayed)—(AP)—Shipping circles said today a Turkish cargo ship of 123 tons, carrying products to Burgas, Bulgaria, for trans-shipment to Germany was sunk Monday by a Russian submarine operating in the Black Sea off the Turkish coast.

The crew was given warning and permitted to abandon ship in a lifeboat, these sources said. Then the freighter was sunk by gunfire. The crew of five reached shore safely.

A number of similar ships loading at Istanbul for the same journey called off loading operations today and refused to sail. Another ship has been sunk on the same route since Monday.

Despondency caused by ill health was given as the reason for suicide. Born in Polish Russia of German extraction, he came to Canada thirteen years ago and has lived eight miles south of Killam.

"WALK LIKE BLAZES" IF TRUCKS GONE

British Western Desert Army Makes Nightly Forays

Patrols Reconnoitre In "Anybody's Land" As Navy Pops At Germans

By RICHARD MOWRER

WITH THE BRITISH EIGHTH ARMY, WESTERN DESERT, Egypt, Nov. 6.—(CDN)—We were sitting in no-man's-land wondering how much colder it would get before dawn came and thinking that, anyhow, to go out on night patrol was a dumb thing to do, when the naval bombardment began.

It was night, gray-black, starry kind of night without a moon and everything was very still. Then somewhere to the north a pinkish flare suddenly flowed in the sky. It seemed to stand still as if hung up like a lantern on a celestial hook.

The stillness continued unbroken and we watched the flare. Then more pink lights spread their glow farther off to the right. The first flare, now perceptibly lower on the horizon, suddenly went out.

"Looks as if Jerry's going to cop it," somebody muffled in a great coat whispered.

"How far away are those flares?"

"Dunno. Lights are deceptive in the desert. Probably at Bardia or thereabouts. Funny there's no ack-ack."

AIR ARM SPOTTING

Another flare silently appeared still farther to the right, followed by a cluster of three more. Suddenly great white flashes jaggedly illuminated the horizon. For 20 seconds longer the stillness of the desert persisted. Then we heard the shuddering thunder of big explosions.

"There is no ack-ack so it can't be an air bombardment," someone murmured. "It must be the Royal Navy and it's probably the air arm dropping flares and spoiling for them. Gad, what a show!"

We drew our blankets and great-coats closer and watched the flares and flashes and listened to the rumblings where the Germans were "copping it." An hour before nightfall we had started out on the night patrol. The sun was just setting when we reached the place where the South African armored cars were posted as advanced observation units. On the great plateau south of the escarpment, mobility is quick and sudden and the armored cars spend all the daylight hours watching the enemy for signs of movement.

The patrol commander had got the latest dope about the Germans from the armored cars and then walked back to our vehicles.

"No more cigarettes now," he had announced.

MOVE IN DARK

We had waited for the last bit of daylight to fade away so as not to be silhouetted against the skyline while the commanding officer took careful compass bearings. Then complete night took over and we had started out.

I was sitting next to the driver of the second vehicle while on my left the second in command stood on the running board gripping an American tommygun and peering ahead to keep the dark shape of the leading truck in view.

Some parts of the desert had been fairly smooth going, with stones popping out noisily under the tires, but there had been awfully bumpy stretches. Once in a while the leading truck had stopped so that the patrol leader could take fresh compass bearings. We had gone on cautiously this way, 17 miles into what in the daytime is German-held territory but at night-time is anybody's land since at dusk the Germans withdraw a few miles to safer, stronger night positions.

Once our leading truck had skidded its left-rear wheel into a slit trench and we had piled out and used our shoulders to get it out again. At one place we had passed over zigzag tank tracks showing strong skidmarks on the desert's hard surface—the site of some tank engagements weeks before.

DON'T BE ASLEEP

"Come with us 300 paces," the patrol leader had told us. "Then you must go back to the trucks and wait. We'll be away four hours. After midnight don't for God's sake, be asleep—and listen for our whistle. If we can't hear you whistle back, then we'll signal. Answer likewise. If anything goes wrong and you have to leave the trucks, give us the signal so we'll know that the trucks aren't here any more.

"You know the north star? Well, walk away from the north star southward—walk like blazes and don't let that north star be anywhere except right behind you. Our armored cars will pick you up when it gets light."

On a previous night patrol the men had failed to find their trucks and had walked back 25 miles before they were picked up.

We had gone forward 300 paces to a freshly dug trench. For what seems a long time the patrol leader and the sergeant of the Royal Engineers had crouched there and examined the ground for mines or booby traps. Then we had returned to the trucks while others had vanished silently into the night.

Hugging our blankets and greatcoats about us we watched the sharp bright flashes of the Royal Navy's shells ripping the blackness out of the sky. For a full 20 minutes the distant rumblings continued. The flares were now illuminating a heavy smoke pall. Then the bombardment abruptly ceased. The night grew colder. We shivered, listening for sounds and glancing occasionally at the luminous dials of our watches.

GOT INFORMATION

Midnight came and it was time for the others to be getting back. We strained to hear them whistle but there wasn't a sound. An hour went by, then another half-hour and we waited and nobody said anything. Suddenly a quarter of a mile beyond us they signaled and a few minutes later, they were with us. The trucks started up, their motors terribly loud in that stillness. The men spoke in low voices.

"We found out what we wanted to find out," said the man with the tommygun. "We must have walked 10 miles."

We got into the trucks and bumped along southward. Again we criss-crossed big German tank tracks. Occasionally we stopped to check the compass bearings. There have been ambushes in this wide no-man's-land at night. Once an English patrol ran into some Germans laying minefields intended for British armored cars and lost one truck and some of the party in the shooting that followed.

This night everything was fine—except that I lost a button off my greatcoat. Wonder if the Germans have found it.

Conscription To Include Women For War Duties

LONDON, Nov. 6—(CP)—The Evening Star said today women would be included in future military and industrial conscription now being considered by the government.

British women now are registered for war work but their service in army, navy and airforces auxiliaries is voluntary.

Soldier Gifts Not To Weigh Over 11 Pounds

By PATRICIA CONNOLLEY

OTTAWA, Nov. 6.—(CP)—Feminine hearts may be torn between adding another piece of fudge or an extra Santa Claus sticker on Christmas parcels for the men in the Canadian forces overseas, but whether or not it is daintily packed, each parcel must weigh only 11 pounds.

This is the edict of postal authorities who add that to ensure reaching the men overseas parcels must be mailed by Nov. 10.

Postal officials further advise the sensible thing in wrapping the holiday parcels is to confine festive wrappers and ribbons to the inside parcels. "Parcels all decked out in ribbons would be a sorry sight when they arrived," one official said.

OMIT FRESH EGGS

The post office department makes no attempt to suggest what should be included in parcels bound for overseas but it does ask that fresh eggs be omitted—they won't be fresh on arrival and maybe some new handkerchiefs or socks would be spoiled by them.

Also, don't send jam or jelly or anything else in glass jars. Fresh fruit, too, is in the same class as eggs — far from fresh when it reaches the other side.

All Christmas parcels for overseas should be fully prepaid, securely packed in strong containers, wrapped in several layers of thick paper and tied with strong twine.

A slip bearing the address of the soldier or airman who should receive the parcel and the return address of the sender should be enclosed with the contents. The sender's address should appear on the cover and completed customs declarations forms are required on all parcels for troops abroad.

PROPER ADDRESS FORM

Here's the proper address form: Regimental number, rank and name.

Name and details of unit (company or section, squadron, battery, holding unit, etc).

Name of regiment or branch of service.

Wheat Reserve For Exporting Nations Urged

REGINA, Nov. 6—(CP)—N. E. Dodd, director of the western division of the "Triple A" program of the United States, in an address to the 17th annual meeting of the Saskatchewan Wheat Pool Wednesday advocated negotiation of an international agreement between the wheat exporting countries of the world "which would aim at the establishment of an ever normal granary reserve upon which the import nations might draw."

In making the suggestion, Mr. Dodd outlined the objects of the Triple A in its relation to United States agriculture, and showed that under the operation of the plan, farmers participating received an average loan price of 98 cents per bushel at the farm which up to the present time has been maintained with no cost to the Commodity Credit Corporation.

SHARE BUSINESS

Applying the principle of the Triple A to the proposed international arrangement, Mr. Dodd suggested that by a definite understanding between exporting nations, each could be apportioned a fair share of the export business and provision could be made for each nation to build up a reasonable reserve that would stand there as a guarantee to the rest of the world, that there would always be a supply of wheat sufficient for the need even in years of crop failure.

"Nobody knows the kind of use you are going to have for this wheat," he said. We've got to have an international reserve and each country should carry its own reserve. . . ."

"If we accept the responsibility to see that we always have an adequate food supply, I think they should see that we get a fair price for it," Mr. Dodd added.

CANBERRA, Nov. 6.—(AP)—Tanks have already been brought to Australia to equip an armored division and any more which may be available before the division goes abroad will be kept in Australia, it was announced Wednesday. This decision is interpreted to mean the government intends keeping home defense forces mobilized to the highest degree of efficiency possible and intensify their striking power by the provision of modern equipment.

Army Minister Francis Forde said the decision would not affect the departure of armored forces for the middle east as the whole modern British and American tanks and vehicles in the world are being supplied abroad. Mr. Forde added that the program of Australian tank production was being speeded up and the new tanks being built would be suitable for conditions in the middle east or in Australia.

Air Supremacy To Bring War Victory

LOS ANGELES, Nov. 6.—(AP)—Sir Thomas A. Barrow, air minister of New Zealand, predicted in an interview Wednesday that the war would end early in 1943 "after the democracies have world command of the air."

He left home on the Pacific Clipper plane after a three months inspection of Royal Air Force flying courses in Canada.

"By the end of this year, New Zealand, Australia and Canada will turn out between 50,000 and 100,000 trained airmen, about half of them pilots," Sir Thomas said. "Planes are being provided in keeping with the training.

"When 1942 rolls around, we will have at least 180,000 trained airmen—half pilots, the others navigators, bombardiers, gunners and observers."

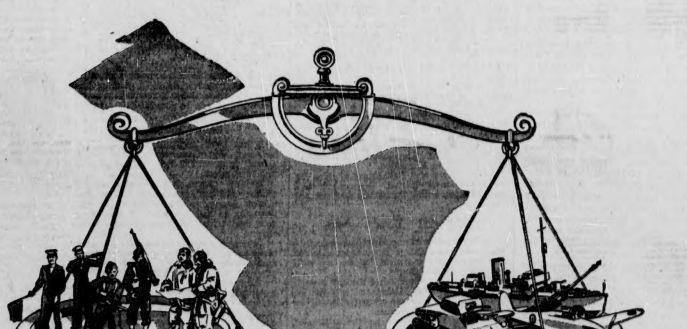
MEN + MACHINES = VICTORY



The Cost of Modern Mechanized Warfare is Colossal

To provide powerful weapons of war for our soldiers, sailors and airmen—to ensure our very liberty—dollars and more dollars are needed.

For illustration:

"In the last war a Canadian infantry division had 153 motor vehicles and 4,400 horses. A division today has no horses or wagons, but 3,500 motor vehicles of more than 160 different types. It cost $2,000,000 to equip a first Great War division with horses and trucks and keep them for a year. It costs $12,000,000 to do the same for a modern division.

"A modern division has many times the numbers and types of weapons used in a division in the last war and the cost of upkeep and ammunition for a year has risen from $3,150,000 to $26,000,000.

"The overall cost of creating a 1914-18 division and maintaining it in action for a year varied from $30,000,000 to $48,000,000, depending on the severity of the fighting. Today's cost is $86,000,000.

"FOR EVERY DOLLAR SPENT IN THE LAST GREAT WAR ON ARMAMENT AND TRANSPORT, $5.00 IS BEING SPENT NOW."

We must each examine our personal spending. Each of us must support Canada's war effort to the limit of his financial ability.

The help of every Canadian is needed for Victory. In these days of war the thoughtless, selfish spender is a traitor to our war effort. A reduction in personal spending is now a vital necessity to relieve the pressure for goods, to enable more and more labour and materials to be diverted to winning the war. The all-out effort, which Canada must make, demands this self-denial of each of us.

What are you doing about it? Are you doing your full share or just leaving it to the other fellow?

They Are Losing Too

Berlin last week announced that its raiders had sunk 14 vessels in a convoy on route to Britain. In point of fact four were sunk, the other ten coming safely into port with their cargoes.

While making this customary correction of Nazi arithmetic, the Admiralty gave out some more information. During the first four days of this month scout ships and R.A.F. planes sank or damaged 32 Axis vessels in the Channel. In October the number was 89 and in September 53; the figures thus going up steadily and rapidly. In the Mediterranean 29 Axis vessels were sunk in September, and 34 sunk or damaged during October.

These figures serve to explain one reason why people in Germany are forbidden on severe penalties to listen to British broadcasts. It would cramp the Goebbels' style if his listeners were allowed to learn how strongly he draws on his imagination to keep them thinking Britain is being starved while Axis ships move freely in the coastal waters and the Mussolini lake.

While, for military reasons, London does not publish regular reports of Axis vessels destroyed, the fact probably is that week by week as many of these are sent to the bottom as the ships which are sunk by Axis submarines along the sea lanes to Britain. The war of sinkings is not by any means one-sided, though loss of ships is less serious to the Axis powers than to Britain.

Why Don't They Enlist

The industrial branch of Canada's war effort speaks for itself; the "tools" are being turned out at a rate no one ventured to predict. The air force is expanding satisfactorily, in keeping with the increase in training facilities and planes. The navy has grown fast—fr than even the enthusiastic Minister hoped it could. The financing is being done on an admittedly safe and sane basis, and with marked success.

The one "bad spot" in the whole program is the difficulty in getting men to enlist in the army for overseas service. The monthly quotas are not being met on time, despite the most energetic efforts of recruiting officers, perhaps in some instances because the methods have been more energetic than tactful. This means that new divisions are not coming up to standard according to plans, and that reserves are not being built up fast enough for those already overseas.

This is a matter to which parliament should devote some serious attention. Attention of the inquiring kind, not of the declamatory type. Personal preconceptions of members as to the sufficiency of voluntary enlistment and the desirability of conscription are not to the point. What needs to be known is why men in the needed numbers enlist in the air force and the navy but not in the Active army.

Canadians today are not different from those who rushed into the battalions in the former war. There must be reasons why they are less willing to join up with the infantry. Parliament should put aside political considerations and make a factual examination of the question. That can best be done, can only be done publicly, by approaching the problem from the view-point of the man who is asked to enlist but won't. He isn't a coward. He isn't a fool. He isn't indifferent as to the outcome of the war. Then why doesn't he want to join the infantry? That is what parliament should set itself to find out.

His Little Allies

The Finns have not been fighting very hard lately, and there are hints that—having regained their lost territory—they are little disposed to involve themselves in war with Britain as well as Russia by continuing on the offensive. The negotiation of a separate peace between Helsinki and Moscow is not unthinkable.

At the other end of the confederacy, Rumania has lost the flower of its army, not in regaining Bessarabia, but in fighting on Russian soil which there is no possibility of it keeping for itself however the war may go. From Istanbul comes a not improbable report that Rumanian troops have been called home, leaving only a token force of a few brigades in the Nazi line-up.

These smaller powers joined Hitler in the attack on Russia for two reasons. Russia grabbed territory that belonged to them, which they wanted to recover. And they were afraid to refuse when the Fuehrer ordered them to make common cause with him.

Both these considerations have been modified by the course of events. Finland and Rumania have recovered the territory they claimed. And Hitler is too busy to turn upon his little allies and punish them if they decline to fight his battles further.

Finnish and Rumanian support enabled the Fuehrer to throw the strength of a continent-wide coalition against Russia. But the bonds of the coalition were self-interest and fear. Self-interest ceased to exist when these allies got possession of the territory Russia had taken from them, and it may well be that fear of the Hitler wrath is fading as the prospect of victory over Russia grows uncertain.

It may even occur to the governments of these states that in the long view they can better afford to risk the displeasure of Hitler than to incur the just enmity of Russia. And for immediate consideration their rulers are probably as much afraid of rebellion at home as of attack by the fully occupied Nazi armies.

ON THE RIGHT TRACK

Now that the Government has adopted prices and wages policies, it will be useful to study the anti-inflation measures in Britain and the controversy now going on with respect to their adequacy. The contrast, of course, is strongly in our favor. Canadian labor leaders by their agreement have made it easy for the Government to adopt the British policy, whereas in Britain the trades union leaders have successfully resisted wage control. This, incidentally, is a good way of measuring the obligation Canadians owe to their labor leaders.

As to whether a ceiling on wages is essential, British experience leaves no shadow of doubt. The British Government has sought to control inflation by several methods—by control and rationing, concentration of non-essential industry, price stabilization by bonus or subvention, and by compulsory savings. This year the British Government is spending the huge sum of £100,000,000 on price stabilization. But all these measures have not kept inflation under control. The ceiling on wages is still lacking and that is what the present row in Britain is all about.

But while we may congratulate ourselves that we have now brought most of the anti-inflation armoury into play (compulsory savings are still to come), this does not means that the fight is won. We can succeed only if the battle is waged relentlessly. There will be no hope if the government permits holes to be punched through the ceilings, thinking that a little yielding here and there won't matter. There will be all kinds of demands, backed by strong political influence, for higher wages and higher prices. These must be resisted.—Winnipeg Free Press.

War Aims Need To Be Redefined

Must Fixed Limit Be Placed on Material Aid to Russia At Our Expense?

By HAROLD L. WEIR

I have pointed out, in this space, the difficulty that has arisen in Britain over giving military aid to Russia.

Britain is not strong enough, at this moment, to risk that invasion of the European continent which the Soviet are demanding of her. A defeat in such an attempt would leave her wide open for an invasion attempt which Hitler could easily stage with the four million troops he is believed to have still concentrated in Western Europe.

Harold L. Weir

Britain is prepared to make an African drive. Russia objects to this on the ground that such a move would not help her. Since the Caucasian oil fields are Hitler's objective in Russia, the rational procedure, one would think, would be for Britain to give Russia assistance in defending that area.

Stalin will not consent to this on the ground that he does not want British troops on Russian soil.

Admitting that Russian suspicion stems from the manner in which Britain, among other nations, isolated Russia and held her in contempt during her communistic experimental period, admitting that we were highly culpable in this attitude, and admitting that any force directed toward the destruction of Hitler is a benign force and should be encouraged, it is till apparent that somewhere a safety line should be drawn beyond which we may not step in our aid to the Soviets.

We cannot jeopardize Britain for the sake of saving Russia.

It seems to me that our war aims should be carefully redefined so that we do not fall into any such error of enthusiasm propagated by uninformed and unthinking zealots.

Aims That Coincide

The salvation of Russia is important to us, speaking very frankly and honestly, from three chief standpoints:

1. Because a resisting Russia occupies and destroys German men and equipment that might be wreaking destruction elsewhere.

2. Because a competent and intact Russia will prevent the German seizure of the Caucasian oil wells which would permit Hitler to carry on the war indefinitely.

3. Because a defeated Russia, with the mercurial Russian temperament, might be converted into a Nazi Russia. No matter how the ideologies may differ, the step between any two kinds of totalitarianisms is not very great. On the other hand, a victorious Russia, still bitter against Hitlerism could just as easily be swung into democratic tendencies.

From these standpoints, our aims and the aims of the Soviets coincide perfectly.

In these particulars, it is just as important to us as it is to Russia that every sacrifice be made to stop Hitler's advance into Russian territory.

Aims That Differ

It has been apparent from the first, however, that there were bound to be points upon which Britain and Russia could not agree.

This, of course, is a weakness of any military alliance. It explains the fact that it took four years for the Allies to beat Germany in the last war. It explains a good deal of the delay and futility in this one.

In any coalition of states for the purposes of war, there will always be private aims and aspirations that have to be reconciled for the common weal.

Any allied war movement, therefore, is essentially a political weapon. It will not be allowed to re-lease the property leased by him on the market square.

Poland's Stamps

LETTER TO LONDON SPECTATOR

Sir: In the Spectator of September 26 the writer mentioned that the Polish Government proposes to issue a set of postage stamps.

The Polish Government in London have decided to avail themselves of their rights under the Universal Postal Convention, signed on May 23, 1939, in Buenos Aires. Accordingly, on December 15, 1941, a Polish postal service will be put into operation on Polish merchant ships. Both merchant ships and men-of-war, ordinary and registered correspondence being accepted. Furthermore, as agreed with the British postal authorities, it will be possible in certain conditions for Polish military camps in Great Britain to avail themselves of the Polish postal service.

The procedure will be that on certain days letters from the camps, after passing the censor, will be sent to Polish vessels going to sea, where Polish stamps will be affixed and properly cancelled. You will see, therefore, that Polish stamps will be issued precisely for the purpose of franking letters and so I think they are sure to be of interest to collectors.—T. Hitting The Pipe Again

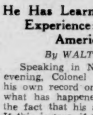
Lindbergh's Previous Advice Disastrous

He Has Learned Nothing From Experience: Would Imperil America's Safety

By WALTER LIPPMANN

Speaking in New York on Thursday evening, Colonel Lindbergh expounded his own record on the war, arguing that what has happened in Europe is due to the fact that his advice was disregarded. If this is true, if Colonel Lindbergh is in fact the far-seeing, expert observer and political prophet who was disregarded, then his views on the present situation do indeed have very great weight.



W. Lippmann

Here, in his own words, is his version of what happened:

By 1938 I had come to the conclusion that a war occurred between Germany on the one side, and England and France on the other, it would result either in a German victory or in a prostrate and devastated Europe. I therefore advocated that England and France build their military forces with the utmost rapidity so that they permit Germany to expand eastward into Russia without declaring war.

As you know, the opposite school of thought prevailed.

Colonel Lindbergh's memory has failed him. The views he held in 1938 were not disregarded. They were followed by the Chamberlain government in Britain and by M. Georges Bonnet, the Foreign Minister of France. The advice which Colonel Lindbergh gave the British and French governments was not disregarded. "The opposite school of thought" did not prevail. Colonel Lindbergh's school of thought prevailed, and so did Chamberlain and Daladier went to Munich in September, 1938, and signed the Munich pact.

Took His Advice

At Munich Messrs. Chamberlain and Daladier gratefully took Colonel Lindbergh says they should have done. They excluded Russia from the Munich conference. They compelled Czechoslovakia to surrender the defences, which were the strongest in eastern Europe, and then, having isolated Russia, they did exactly what Colonel Lindbergh thinks they should have done: they declared to Hitler and served notice on Stalin that "they would permit Germany to expand eastward into Russia without declaring war."

If Colonel Lindbergh had judged Hitler and the European situation correctly, the Munich pact should have meant that Hitler would, thereafter, have improved his relations with Britain and France while he prepared to expand eastward into Russia." But in fact Hitler did not do what Colonel Lindbergh's prophecy required Hitler to do. Within a fortnight of Munich Hitler delivered a violent speech against Britain going so far as to name the British public men who, in his opinion, should not be allowed to hold office. He then launched his attack on Russia, but on Britain and France, for a redistribution of their African empires, and his agents were at work fomenting insurrection in the Middle East.

Opposite Effect

In other words, the effect of Munich was the exact opposite of what Mr. Chamberlain, and incidentally Colonel Lindbergh, profess to think. Hitler did not turn against Russia. On the contrary, having separated Russia from Britain and France, he could ignore Russia for the time being, could even prepare a temporary agreement with Russia, while he devoted his attention, first, to separating the French Army from the Polish and then to separating Britain from France. Thus, though it is a debatable question whether Britain, France, Czechoslovakia, and Russia could or should have resisted Hitler before Munich, it is absolutely certain that Colonel Lindbergh's theory that peace could be bought by making a German-Russian war was disastrously wrong. Permitting, in fact inviting Hitler to make war on Russia did not produce the war against Russia which, in Colonel Lindbergh's view, it should have meant.

What it did was to make Russia an undeclared enemy of Britain and France, and in the critical period from 1939 to 1941, something very near to an ally of Hitler. Colonel Lindbergh's idea, which was also that of the British and French appeasers, was that Britain and France could buy safety and time to arm by inviting Hitler to attack Russia. This idea, as dishonorable as it was foolish, was the boomerang which made it safe for Hitler to go to war, knowing that he need not fear the hostility of Stalin or bother about the Russian Army until he had disposed of the French Army.

Lindbergh Heeded

Colonel Lindbergh cannot present himself as the prophet who was not listened to. The historical record refutes his present image of himself as the disregarded prophet. He was listened to, and the policy he advocated was followed: Mr. Chamberlain tried to do exactly what Colonel Lindbergh says he should have done. He tried to push Hitler eastward against Russia while Britain armed and while Britain hoped that Hitler would become too exhausted in Russia to attack Britain. What Colonel Lindbergh did not foresee, what even with hindsight he does not yet see, is that once Britain and France had been separated from Russia, it was as much Stalin's interest as Hitler's to have Germany "expand" first towards the west rather than to the east.

Thus the "conclusion" Colonel Lindbergh had come to in 1938 was, as the event has shown, a complete miscalculation both as regards Hitler and Stalin. And the tragedy of Europe is not that Colonel Lindbergh's conclusions were disregarded but that they were accepted by the ruling classes of Britain and France.

Learned Nothing

It is Colonel Lindbergh who has learned nothing from experience, not even from the events in which he himself played a not inconsiderable part. Thinking that his advice to abandon Russia in 1938 and invite Hitler to attack Russia was disregarded, when, in fact, it was adopted at Munich, he still thinks that the way to preserve the peace is to invite Hitler to destroy all his opponents one by one. That is Colonel Lindbergh's advice to us today. He wants to go on doing what Mr. Chamberlain, fortified by his own advice, did in 1938—to deliver to Hitler one by one the nations capable of resisting him.

Thus, having been in favor of a Nazi attack on Russia in 1938 as a means of preserving "peace," he would now abandon Russia to Hitler, and he would now abandon Britain to Hitler, and he would now abandon China to Hitler's ally—all for the sake of peace and in the name of peace.

If he can now succeed in doing in the United States what in 1938 he did in Britain and France he will once more separate Russia from Britain, and then he will separate Britain from America. The practical consequences now would again be what it was after 1938—not to preserve the peace but to make certain that Hitler did not have to fight more than one great power at a time.

And so when he says that "after two years of war we are in a better position to judge the policies that were followed by England and France," he is quite right. But he might add that we are also in a better position to judge the policy advocated by Colonel Lindbergh since 1938.

Declares Committee Mischievous

Preservation of Democracy Demands Defeat of Candidates Is His Opinion

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Editor, Bulletin: We thank the so-called, self-appointed "Citizens' Committee" for their continued solicitude for the welfare of our city; but feel we are entitled to be advised as to their true motives.

Overlooking the fact that that committee's supporters have admittedly been reduced to a mere rump of its former self, we could still be grateful to them if there continued to be any valid reason for its existence.

Once, they perhaps served a useful purpose, but not now. Possibly they seek to save the citizens from their own folly and incompetence. We resent the implied suggestion of such a necessity and question the competence of the committee to make it.

More likely it is the desire of a few officious persons to run the city from behind the scenes. That desire is mischievous, undemocratic and intolerable. It must stop. And now is the proper time for the voters to assert both their capacity to govern themselves and their democratic integrity.

To preserve our democracy as well as our self-respect, the entire Citizens' slate, irrespective of the fact it contains some satisfactory candidates, should be defeated and the committee thus disciplined.

Dunking Endorsed By Emily Post

FROM THE ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

Among the more startling current events is this unexpected item: Emily Post has endorsed dunking.

Not, we hasten to explain, the dunking of a doughnut in a cup of coffee, though that would logically be the next step. The etiquette arbiter has approved functional rather than gustatory dunking, but dunking it is, all the same.

A frustrated reader writes Mrs. Post about a sad experience with a glass of claret at a recent dinner party. There it stood, all sparkles and invitation, but so full that the guest dared not lift the glass lest it splash a ruddy stain on the immaculate linen. She reluctantly left it untouched, but asks Mrs. Post, "What shall I have done?"

Mrs. Post has a practical answer. The disappointed guest could have held a small piece of bread against the rim, perhaps several, she responds, "and sopped up enough to bring the liquid safely lower."

So, if the Doughnut Dunker Association wants Mrs. Post to endorse their rite, it will be easy. Just pour her a brimful cup of coffee at the next dinner party, leave a doughnut lying near by, and Mrs. Post's ingenuity will do the rest. That will be a testimonial really worth having.

this writer's bet that they have a "Long, Long Trail" to travel to even get in the same class as the original Dumbells of 1918 or 1919.

It was our privilege in 1919 to see the boys put on their show on the biggest and most beautiful stage in Canada in Toronto's largest theatre (at the time). It's only once in a generation that such all round high class entertaining material is gathered in one company. We will go further and say that the characterization of "Marjorie" by Rose Hamilton simply made competition in the "girl" show impossible.

The new company may be best wishes and if they want to attain the laurels of their predecessors they will need lots of good wishes.

V.V.R. Offers Beautiful Trip To Europe's Towns

By J. M. GILROY

NORTHVILLE—Would you like a free trip to Europe?

Hitherto, only some of the largest corporations on the continent have been able to offer this inducement to competitors in slogan and other advertising contests, but the V.V.R. here are making it possible for certain selected individuals to make the trip free of all expense.

The only conditions attached to this generous offer are that you be a male British subject between the ages of 18 and 45 years, of good health, of good character, and that you attend the V.V.R. dance to be staged at Wildwood hall, Armistice night, to send smokes to servicemen from Northville-Wildwood-Chip Lake districts.

THRILLING TRIP

The trip to dear old Blighty and points east will be much more thrilling now than it would have been two years ago. Consider, for instance, the innocent pleasure to be derived from walking down the Unter den Linden in battered Berlin and heaving a brick through the only plate glass window left intact in the whole thoroughfare. Or sniffing the ripe odor of eau "de" Cologne right in Cologne itself after the boys of the R.A.F. have been indulging in Halloween-pranks over this one proud Rhineland city.

Through the thoughtfulness of those in charge of arrangements for the trip, free shooting will be made available. If you are a good shot, it will add materially to the attractions to be encountered as you stride through Stettin, to like snapshots at the primitive inhabitants.

At Bonn, famous university city once a stronghold of philosophical studies, you too can indulge in some philosophical reflections as you gaze at dead Nazis and reflect how harmless, how meek and mild, they appear.

You may saunter through the gardens of Berchtesgaden, and years afterwards you may tell your grandchildren that Hitler was fond of flowers.

HERE'S THE POINT

Efforts are being made by the V.V.R. to have a recruiting booth at the dance, and it is hoped that young men with a bent for travel will seize this opportunity.

Nursing Service For Canuck Navy

OTTAWA, Nov. 6—(CP)—Establishment of a nursing service in the Royal Canadian Navy was disclosed Sunday night in the Canada Gazette.

A navy spokesman described the new service as an off-shoot from the army nursing service which formerly looked after navy needs. He said the service would be "on a small scale."

Navy hospitals were being built at Halifax and Esquimalt and the nursing service would staff them. It might also staff other small units in other places but "definitely none of the nurses will go to sea."

Highest rank in the service is that of matron-in-chief, equivalent to Lieutenant-Commander, and the pay is $7.75 a day. Matrons, who have corresponding rank of Lieutenants, draw $6.50.

A nursing sister and dietician gets $4.25 and has rank equivalent to sub-lieutenant. Her pay increases to $5 after six months. A nursing sister who is an assistant matron or in charge of a hospital of from 100 to 175 beds gets an extra 50 cents a day. Home science and physiotherapy aids, with corresponding rank to midshipman, are paid $3.

Debt Statement Report Denied By Mr. Aberhart

MEDICINE HAT, Nov. 6—(CP)

Premier William Aberhart of Alberta denied in an address here Wednesday night he had said in a Winnipeg address Oct. 29 money borrowed by the Dominion government to finance the war effort "will never be paid."

Speaking at a Social Credit meeting in reply to a statement issued Tuesday by Finance Minister Ilsley at Ottawa, Mr. Aberhart said:

"I said in Winnipeg that the money debt is skyrocketing. I did not say the country could never repay the debt. I don't know how it can be done under the present system.

Under a proper financial system, the principal and interest may be paid but I have yet to hear from Mr. Ilsley how the debt is to be paid."

REFERS TO DEBT

Mr. Aberhart said that from 1914 through the last war and depression up to 1936, the Dominion's war debt increased seven times. "If it does the same thing through this war and for 25 years after 1939, the interest on the Dominion's debt will be $2,000,000 per day at the end of the 25 years. Someone will have to stop it or it will go there," he said.

Dr. J. L. Robinson, Social Credit member of the legislature for Medicine Hat, who was chairman of the meeting, said that to stop finance fettering the feet of the government, Aberhart had fought in the past. "He is organizing now in a national way to fight in the future."

The Premier said the Winnipeg convention "made me feel like 1935", at which time he was campaigning for the provincial election. "I feel satisfied results of that convention will spread and spread and spread," he said.

WILL ASK PREMIER TO STATE POSITION

CALGARY, Nov. 6—(CP)—Decision to request Premier Aberhart to make a statement setting fourth his exact position with regard to the question of Canada's ability to pay its war debt, was made by the council of the Calgary Board of Trade Wednesday.

The decision was made after council had heard that some business men were disturbed over the alleged statement of the premier with regard to Canada's implied inability to pay its war debt, and in view of the fact the premier has denied the statement credited to him in the press.

It was decided to hold the nomination meeting for the 1942 council within the next few weeks.

Nomination by the executive of Fred E. Spooner to a panel for the prairie regional war labor board was approved.

V

PREMIER DENIES STATEMENT "CAN'T PAY"

LETHBRIDGE, Nov. 6—(CP)—Premier Aberhart in an address here Tuesday night denied that he had ever said that Canada would never pay the public debt left after the war is over. Mr. Aberhart was addressing the Southwestern Alberta Teachers' Association annual convention.

Telling the teachers' convention here last night that he was misquoted, Mr. Aberhart added: "I never said at any time that Canada could never pay its debt. It is the richest country in the world and we can pay an enormous debt.

"I did say that during the last 25 years the debt of Canada had increased seven-fold. If we increase our debt at the same rate as during the past 25 years, we will have to pay $2,000,000 interest per day at the end of another 25 years. I did not say that debts of the previous war have not been paid."

The Alberta Premier said this war was proving more costly than the First Great War and the public debt could be expected to increase at a greater rate.

Looking them Over

by JACK KELLY

CANCELLATION of the long-awaited western junior football final here between the Edmonton Maple Leafs and winners of the Manitoba-Saskatchewan playoff will come as a disappointment to the Leafs and the city's hundreds of ardent junior fans, but under the conditions this cancellation appears the best move.

The Edmonton Junior League, the body that would have to underiake the bulk of the financing, feels that it can't gamble its comparatively small cash reserve by staging a final here on November 15. If Manitoba and Saskatchewan get their series over and a winner here by November 11, Edmonton will still be interested—otherwise it's all off.

This decision was forecast in this column some days ago when it was discovered that two Saskatchewan teams had started a last-minute playoff series that would not be finished until this coming Sunday.

Too much criticism should not be directed at the Saskatchewan clubs for gumming up the playoff schedule. Instead Notre Dame College and Campion College of Regina should be given credit for stirring up some semblance of interest in the junior game in Saskatchewan.

Too Much Dependence on Conference

THE blame for the situation rests more squarely with the Western Conference. This fall's western junior playdown proposal was put before them a year ago for their support and approval and the conference created the impression at that time that it was wholeheartedly behind the undertaking.

Winnipeg apparently carried through an organized junior league on schedule, but in Regina nobody did anything about the juniors. The grid crowd apparently concentrated on the senior Roughriders—and no junior football was played. Then when Notre Dame and Campion colleges discovered there really would be a western junior playdown, they got together the best teams they could in a hurry and started a two-game series to decide the Saskatchewan championship, since no football was being played anywhere else in the province.

The western final would still have been run off on schedule if the Western Conference had not decided to open its title series between the Bombers and Roughriders in Regina this Saturday, throwing the juniors aside as of no importance.

While this mix-up is a discouraging blow to western junior football, a lot of real good can come out of it if those concerned are willing to profit by experience.

Saskatchewan Organization Needed

SASKATCHEWAN is the weak link at present, but it would seem that such an energetic organizer as Father Murray of Notre Dame College could get a provincial body set up there to handle the juniors next season—see that a league was organized and playoffs completed on time.

Alberta, Saskatchewan and Manitoba should then form a Western Junior Conference—whose duty it would be to supervise the western interprovincial playoff games.

It seems that we can hope for little or no real help from the Western Conference. That body has a big enough headache trying to keep its three senior clubs going. Knowing something of the size of that problem, I won't blast them for not doing all that they might have for the juniors, although their only hope for the future lies in the development of juniors.

We ourselves are to blame to some extent for expecting too much from the senior conference. If you want to be sure of where you are standing, always stand on your own two feet.

EDMONTON FINDS GUARANTEES IMPOSSIBLE

Western Junior Grid Final Cancelled

SPORTS BULLETIN

Delayed Playoff Found Too Risky

THERE will be no western junior football final in Edmonton—unless the winner of the Saskatchewan-Manitoba playoff gets here in time to play on November 11—an apparent impossibility.

This decision was reached last night by the Edmonton Junior Football League, the body that will have to finance the proposed western final.

In announcing the league's decision, President Art Carlson pointed out that the weather would be too uncertain to warrant a guarantee running into at least $700 for a game here on November 15, the earliest date a Saskatchewan-Manitoba championship team can be decided owing to delay in the Saskatchewan playoff.

GUARANTEE UNSATISFACTORY

The Western Conference agreed to financial assistance for a western junior final, but the guarantee it is willing to make is not sufficient to cover the risks the Edmonton League would take in attempting to put over a game as late as Nov. 15.

Last fall Edmonton and Calgary sought to set the stage for a western playdown and final for this season under the auspices of the Western Conference. That body gave semi-official approval to the idea, but it was only a month ago that the conference came through with a definite proposition. Like the juniors, the senior gridders are short of cash and their guarantee was limited to $200 after the home club had produced at least $400. Furthermore, the conference stipulated that it would take the next $200 over the $600 if the gate should go that high.

NO CHANCE TO WIN

Junior officials here take the stand that they can't possibly make any money on such an arrangement but can lose their shirts. However they were willing to take the gamble if the final were staged here but not later than November 11.

For some time now Edmonton has been burning up the wires trying to get conference officials to speed up the playoff in Saskatchewan, but without any results. Manitoba champions have been ready for nearly two weeks now, waiting for Saskatchewan to get a champion decided.

"We regret having to call off the final like this," Art Carlson declared, "but we feel that it is better to keep our own league in sound financial condition than endanger it by underwriting the expenses for a playoff on November 15."

WINNIPEG PLANS REGINA TRIP

WINNIPEG, Nov. 6—(CP)—Stan Pepler, of Winnipeg, president of the Manitoba Rugby Union and Manitoba representative of the Western Conference for minor rugby, Wednesday night said that as far as he knew Winnipeg Roamers, provincial junior football champions, will travel to Regina to play the Saskatchewan title holders Nov. 11.

"If the Alberta champions want to default the western final, that's their business, but as far as I know the Roamers are still going to Regina," said Pepler, when told that Art Carlson, president of the Edmonton Junior Football league, had announced Edmonton Maple Leafs, Alberta champions, will not play the Manitoba-Saskatchewan winners in Edmonton Nov. 15.

The Manitoba and Saskatchewan champions originally were scheduled to meet in a sudden-death game in Regina Nov. 8. Pepler said the date was changed to Nov. 11 because it clashed with the date of the first game for the western senior title.

Meagan's Grid Quizagram

North American football is a bit strange to Meagan Taylor, world's lady figure skating champion now touring with "Ice-Capades of 1942" in the U.S. She saw little or nothing of this game during her childhood years at Saskatoon and since then she has spent most of her time in England. Using pantomimes, Meagan, who skated here in Edmonton last spring, suggests three football terms. Try and guess them. The scene on the left represents a touchdown, the centre represents ends and the one on the right—you guessed it —tackle.

Colleges Scramble Fast

Playoff Announcement Started Regina's Juniors

REGINA, Nov. 6.—(CP)—Two light but fast junior rugby teams are locked in a last-minute battle for the Saskatchewan Junior Rugby championship. Last week-end Regina Campion College defeated Wilcox Notre Dame Hounds 6-5 in Regina; but observers maintain there is so little between the clubs that anything can happen when the second game of the total-point series is played on the Wilcox gridiron next Sunday.

Winners of the title quality to meet Winnipeg Roamers, the Manitoba titlists in Regina Nov. 11 in a sudden death game. The winners were then to go on to Edmonton for the prairie final Nov. 15. Decision by Edmonton officials yesterday to cancel this final has left the situation up in the air.

NO JUNIOR ACTIVITY

There was no junior rugby activity in Saskatchewan this year until the Western Conference decided three weeks ago to sponsor a playoff. Then there was a hurried dash to build clubs.

Father Murray's Notre Dame Hounds soon tossed in their hats. Having drilled for several weeks for a Thanksgiving Day exhibition in Edmonton, they were fit for the playoffs. "I have one of the best clubs in college history," said Father Murray, but it is a trifle on the light side for junior competition."

LAST-MINUTE SCRAMBLE

Regina has had no club since the famous Dales, perennial western champs and Dominion titlists in 1939, ceased to function. Enlistments in the services left Daley without their usual strong club but Coach Paul Dojack answered the call and pitched in to help build up a team.

Regina's Campion College squad, leaders in the Interscholastic League, were taken as a nucleus, the available ex-Dales added to the lineup and the result was a capable football club.

"It hardly compares with my former Dale team," says Dojack, who is helping Campion's Father Mackie with the coaching duties. "We lack weight but we have a few nifty backfielders. We have another week ahead of us and if we get over the Wilcox hurdle, we may yet give Winnipeg a battle."

Snow covered fields are handicapping both Wilcox and Regina in practice.

Fifteen Calder Pupils Pass Tests

Several pupils of city schools have been taking advantage of the good weather during the past week to pass the five standard track and field tests under the plan initiated by A. S. Bird, supervisor of physical education.

The late school opening this year made it impossible to hold the usual district field days, but with the co-operation of teachers most of the schools have put the alternative proposal into effect.

Twenty-six boys have already passed their tests, with Calder leading the way with 15.

The list follows:

Edmonton Curlers Meeting Friday

Semi-annual meeting of Edmonton Curling Club is being held at the rink on Friday, Nov. 7, at 8 p.m. After the regular business a short program will follow, with Edward Sturrock and Sam Hobson in charge.

Edmonton curlers are playing host this year to the Thistle Club, the latter's rink now being included in the Manning Depot area. Thistle members will use two sheets each evening during the winter.

President of Edmonton Club this season is Bruce Hamilton and Bill Matheson is again back on the job as secretary-treasurer.

Football Star Joins Air Force

DETROIT, Nov. 6—(AP)—Tom Harmon, Michigan's All-America football star, Wednesday applied for enlistment in the United States Army Air Corps.

Harmon enlisted at the recruiting office here at the same time that his Gary, Ind., draft board, had placed in the mails notification that he would be eligible for induction into the army Nov. 19.

Terry Reardon To Bolster Canadiens

BOSTON, Nov. 6.—(AP)—The transfer of Terry Reardon, one of Boston Bruins' star forwards, to Montreal Canadiens for the 1941-42 National Hockey League season was announced Wednesday night by President Weston Adams.

Reardon will be unable to leave Canada this season because of passport difficulties. As a result, the Bruins have agreed to permit him to play in all of the Canadiens home games as well as the four they have scheduled with the Maple Leafs in Toronto.

In return, the Canadiens turned over the current contract of Paul Gauthier, their alternate goalie now playing for Washington in the American Hockey League.

When Reardon joins Canadiens, he probably will play in front of his brother Kenny, a star defenceman now out of action with an infected eye.

Schriner Not Playing Saturday

TORONTO, Nov. 6—(CP)—Dave (Sweeney) Schriner, high-scoring left-winger with Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League, admitted yesterday he was a little hasty in donning skates after suffering a fractured toe in the season's opener here last Saturday. Schriner had a half-hour test on skates and afterwards told Coach Hap Day the foot was paining him.

Day said the left-winger would be out of Saturday night's game against Boston Bruins. His position will be taken by Bob Davidson.

Former Tiger Shortstop Elected Detroit Alderman

DETROIT, Nov. 6.—(AP)—Irrepressible William G. Rogell, former shortstop of Detroit Tigers and an amateur fireman of such renown that his fans call him "chief," had no public comment Wednesday upon his election to the city council.

Billy didn't stick around for the votes to be counted. He waited just long enough for the polls to open so he could cast his own ballot. Then he struck out for the hinterland and a bit of pheasant hunting. He has not been home since.

Bill Rogell

Maybe the 36-year-old ex-slugger is studying up on his political science. When he announced his candidacy, he admitted that he was a "green pea"—knew nothing about affairs of government.

"But I can learn if I'm elected," he would add quickly.

The voters must have confidence in him, too, or else his platform—parks "For the kids to play in and play off the street"—and his plans for a baseball school under the auspices of the playground department, in which he and other "oldtimers" would teach, appealed.

He placed fifth in a field of 122 in the non-partisan municipal primary and was third among the nine successful candidates in the run-off election Tuesday.

Bill went to Boston Red Sox in 1929 from the Mississippi Valley circuit, played with Jersey City and Toronto Maple Leafs in the International loop, with Detroit Tigers from 1935 to 1940, with Chicago's Cubs in 1940 and bowed out of organized baseball this summer as manager of Lancaster, Pa's, last-place club in the Interstate loop.

Dynamic Professor Bounces Joe Louis Around Savagely

By HARRY FERGUSON

NEW YORK, Nov. 6—(BUP)—Prof. Walston Crocker Brown, who whammed the daylights out of Joe Louis about six months ago, generously gave the Brown Bomber a return bout today. It was murder.

Louis was knocked to all corners of the museum of science and industry by the professor. The Bomber was jabbed silly, caught right crosses on the jaw and finally the Professor exploded a right from a dynamic stance that sent his opponent down for a count of 122.

The Professor, as you probably did not recall, is the man who instructed Lou Nova in the science of what the fighter calls the dynamic jolting and the cosmic punch. Shall we pass over in respectful silence what happened the night Nova got into the ring and began applying the Professor's theories against Louis?

Nova was defeated, but not the Professor. He bounced back against Louis today with some new theories and, between blows directed at the Bomber, announced that he was going to resume his work with Nova.

The beautiful thing about Prof. Brown's bouts with Louis is that the Bomber never has to train for them. He doesn't have to put on gloves and trunks either. In fact, he doesn't even have to show up. Several times he has been hundreds of miles away when the Professor kayoed him. Prof. Brown merely takes his stance (dynamic, of course), starts swinging and then announces that that is the way to lick the heavyweight champion. Poor Louis always looks terrible. Never gets in a punch, as a matter of fact.

That was the way it was today. After Louis took his licking in phenolix (cruddie stuff, eh?) the Professor said he had a new technique to teach Nova. It applies the principles of fencing—the ancient and honorable sport of epee, foil and saber—to boxing.

HERE'S THE LOW-DOWN

Discussing the advice he had offered Nova before the recent hostilities, the professor said:

"I advised Lou not to try to block Louis' punch with gloves or elbows. Instead, I demonstrated how he must train his arms to move from the spine center and use them like two parrying swords. Against any punch, such a parry, if properly executed, will be a sure defence and will open the way to a quick return punch."

The professor then explained that Nova rejected this theory of defence because it tired him too much to practice it, but agreed to use the professor's theories during offensive action. Unfortunately, as your agent recalls the battle, Nova never employed the professor's theories at all because the gods of battles decreed that he should never be on the offensive that night.

LOU WILL TRY AGAIN

But all is forgiven, all's well that ends well and a stitch in time is what they took on Nova's cut face. Lou, according to the professor, is going to return to New York next month and start practicing on the defensive theory in the hope of getting another bout with Louis. The professor will continue to belt Louis around every day or so in an attempt to soften him up.

Prof. Brown warns that unless Louis' opponents adopt the theory of fencing and parrying, the Brown Bomber "may well be champion for 15 years."

Last Minute Goal Holds Shore's Indians To Deadlock

SPRINGFIELD, Mass., Nov. 6—(AP)—Hershey Bears gained a 3-3 overtime tie with Springfield in an American Hockey League game Wednesday night, on left wing, Red Hamill's goal in the final 65 seconds.

Springfield nursed its one-goal margin from midway in the second period until 18:55 minutes of the third when Hamill, camping in front of the Indians' net, took a pass and hooked the puck into the mesh.

Newcomer Jim Peters gave Springfield the lead in the first period, but the Bears tied it up a few minutes later on a goal by Bruce and went ahead seconds after the second period opened on a counter by Frost.

However, goals by Peters and Chuck Corrigan put Springfield back into a lead the Indians retained until Hamill's last-minute goal.

Bisons Drop Third Straight

NEW HAVEN, Conn., Nov. 6—(AP)—Buffalo Bisons suffered their third straight setback since the opening of the American Hockey League season as New Haven Eagles eked out a 3-4 victory Wednesday night, breaking a tie with less than two minutes left to play.

The hero's role went to Al Kuntz who took a pass from his coach, Earl Robinson, and whistled a waist-high shot past Buffalo Goalie Claude Bourque, one of the three men in the Bison lineup who formerly played for New Haven.

The final period was then more than 18½ minutes old, and Gus Mancuso's goal for New Haven 10 seconds before the final gong came as an anti-climax.

The rough game was hardly two minutes old before the score was tied 1-1 on goals by Jack Cain of New Haven and Chuck Shannon for the Bisons.

Coach Robinson put Eagles ahead again by shovelling a left-handed shot past Bourque after a face-off in Buffalo territory, and Georgie Patterson increased the advantage while hard shot that got away from Shannon and Bourque.

Max Bennett got Buffalo's second goal just before the first period ended, and Dede Klein tied it up in the second period during which the penalty box held one or more occupants much of the time.

TORONTO, Nov. 6—(CP)—Art Hallieveil, Toronto race horse owner, said Wednesday he had been informed that the United States treasury department has notified officials of American tracks that when a Canadian or Cuban owner wins a racing purse, 27½ per cent of the purse must be deducted and sent to Washington.

Hallieveil said his information did not indicate whether the money deducted would be rebated in part or full later. He said it is not likely an amount will be taken off it would not be profitable enough for Canad an owners to race their horses in the U.S. this winter.

Vichy Orders Games Shortened

VICHY, Nov. 6—(AP)—Instructed by the sports commissariat to lessen the strain on French athletes because of food restrictions, the French Football Federation reduced soccer games yesterday from 90 to 80 minutes of play and rugby from 80 to 70 minutes.

The National Sports committee disclosed that basketball games would be shortened to 36 minutes of play and tennis matches to three sets each. The number of rounds allowed in boxing matches also will be reduced, and the committee is considering ways to limit the total mileage of bicycle races.

Grid Miracle By Leahy

Here's the Story of the Rebirth of Fighting Spirit at Notre Dame

By Bill Cunningham

MAYBE you're wondered how a coaching staff proceeds in the accomplishment of a miracle. The Leahy story at Notre Dame will stand as an example for the big point about the Notre Dame team is not what it is or isn't, but what it came from. There's no secret about the fact that the man was disappointed when he first clapped an eye on the available material.

Nothing especially promising had come up from the freshmen. He mostly had what hadn't graduated from Elmer Layden's last squad.

He started with a little psychology, the expert application of a little plain, old-fashioned scorn. The squad had lounged in to greet the new coach, marshalled by Capt. Paul Lillis, right tackle. Lillis is a good looking young giant from New Rochelle, N.Y. He's 6 ft. 3, and, at the current burning moment he weighed 235 lbs.

SURPRISED CAPT. LILLIS, BROTHER PLAYERS

"I'M glad to meet you, Mr. Lillis," said Leahy extending his hand. Then, after the formal greeting, Leahy stiffened three fingers, pushed them experimentally, and none too gently, into the midriff of the astonished young man, and said, "By the way, you're pretty soft for a Notre Dame football captain, aren't you, Mr. Lillis? You don't keep yourself in very good condition, do you?" He gave it to them this way all up and down the line.

Call for spring practice brought a mob scene of 130 candidates. It had been the tradition since Rockne that everybody was invited to "go out for too-ball at Notre Dame." Apparently a lot of the young gentlemen through the years had got into the habit of reporting principally so they could get credit for being "on the Notre Dame squad." This gave them social distinction around the Christmas dances back home, or some such.

Leahy lined them up after the first few days and told all but 55 of them to report for intra-mural football, or else hand in their suits.

"I'm sorry," said he, "but you haven't got the physical equipment or the experience to play the kind of football we're going to play. You're liable to get hurt out here, or develop a bad case of sore feet just standing around. Of course, if any of you can prove I'm wrong, we'll be glad to have you. We'll set up special practises to give you a chance."

Of the 75 cut, 59 quit, but 35 refused to take his word for it and four of the 25, Bill Smythe and Robert Ellison, ends, Russell Ashbaugh, a quarterback, and Paul Cunningham, a center, eventually "proved him wrong" and were restored to the varsity squad.

COULD PROMISE ONLY BLOOD, SWEAT, TEARS

BUT to that squad, the original 55, he had already made a speech that went something like this: "About all I can promise you is what Churchill promised the British —blood, sweat and tears.

"Starting with the latter half of this season, Notre Dame is undertaking the toughest two and one-half years of football in this school's history.

"To meet this, we have a squad composed of four veterans, a lot of subs and virtually no sophomores. If you want to quit, quit now. If you stay, I promise you nothing but the hardest work you ever did in your lives—that, and the privilege of fighting your hearts out, win or lose, for the institution we both love—Notre Dame. Make up your minds. I'll meet those who want to stick here tomorrow."

Those coaches really gave it to them. Not even Rockne ever worked players as hard. They groaned, they moaned those first three weeks. There was almost rebellion. Some talked of quitting. But they didn't quit. Finally through the travail and the torture there came to be born a pride at first in the players' ability to take it. Suddenly spirit began to glow. Then it burst into flame. Led by the lean, iron-hard Capt. Lillis, now down to a fighting 205, the team couldn't wait for the swing of the summer and the start of the autumnal wars.

"Let's go!" was the cry in every heart and every voice. It was a fighting team before it ever saw a kickoff. But that was only the psychology and the conditioning. There was plenty of very shrewd coaching.

MADE ZIEMBA INTO CAPABLE CENTRE

THERE was need of a centre, for instance. The logical candidate was good mechanically, but according to the new staff's standards, he was heavy of foot and he likewise had a brick knee. They began to experiment with a big sophomore tackle. Walter Ziemba, 6 ft. 4 in. tall and 235

Westglen Bantams Defeat Technical By Score Of 11-6

Westglen bantams had to work for their 11-6 win over Technical HI in six-man football on Wednesday night. It was just the second game for Tech during the season and they showed a great improvement particularly in the last quarter.

Westglen scored all their points in the first half. Clem Kerr started the winners off with a kick to the goalline by Don Christian.

Dave Jamieson's forward to Glen Barker who was over the line was good for the first touchdown.

In the second quarter Bob Aiken intercepted a Tech forward pass to score another touch, leaving the count 11-0.

The Tech boys came back strong in the third quarter, but were only able to register one point, a kick to the deadline by Don Christian.

In the final 15 minutes Bill Zukewich on an end run chalked up Tech's only major.

Coach Griffing Overhauls Line

WINNIPEG, Nov. 6—(CP)—Winnipeg Blue Bombers Wednesday night raced through another stiff practice at Osborne stadium as they prepared to defend their Western Canada football title against the spirited Regina Roughriders.

The teams play in the Saskatchewan Capital Saturday in the first game of a two out of three series for the Western championship.

Coach Reg Threlfall said his Bombers are "shaping up well" and predicted he will be able to field a "real good team" for Saturday's battle. The turf at Osborne stadium is pretty hard due to the cold fall weather, said Threlfall, but the outdoor practices will be continued.

FRITZ LIMPING

He expected all his players except Fritzy Hanson, blonde backfield menace, to be ready for the Saturday's struggle. "Hanson has a bad charley horse and may not be able to get into the lineup," said Threlfall who will be gunning for his fifth consecutive Western crown as Bomber coach.

Minor injuries to Bernie Thornton, end, who came to Bombers this season from Toronto Argonauts, and linemen Cliff Roseborough and Benny Hinkkin are coming along nicely, said the coach, and Halfback Bill Bolvin is expected to be ready despite a bad shaking up received when Bombers lost 36-6 to Kenosha Cardinals last Sunday at Kenosha, Wis.

BOLVIN ALL SET

Bolvin has been out of Bombers' regular lineup for more than a year due to a knee injury. He was sent onto the field for a short time when Winnipeg defeated Regina 7-4 in the final game of the Western Interprovincial Football Union schedule so that he would be eligible for the finals.

Threlfall said Bolvin, whom he described as "one of my best boys two years ago," was showing his old form. The Bomber mentor is banking on the big halfback to fill the ball-toting shoes of Andy Bieda, who is lieutenant in the Canadian (active) army.

Snow Forces Riders Indoors

REGINA, Nov. 6—(CP)—Forced indoors for workouts because of inclement weather, Regina Roughriders are nevertheless nearing a peak for the opening of their best-of-three playoff against Winnipeg Bombers in Regina Saturday for the Western Interprovincial football title.

Snow covered the Regina field early in the week, then it turned to slush and the footing was bad last night as workmen set about drying up the playing surface for Saturday's game.

Coach Dean Griffing has made the odd change in the Regina lineup. He took over the line that week, overhauled it thoroughly and has placed Francis Pyne, former college all-star wing, replacing Gordon Mitton. Griffing believes this will strengthen his forward wall. Nick Paithouski, former Queen's University star, will play centre.

Ray Powell, plunging halfback who has been idle for a month with a bad shoulder, will be in the lineup Saturday.

Dressen Offered Job Indians Boss

NEW YORK, Nov. 6—(AP)—The latest entry in the Cleveland managerial sweepstakes—one season, with 25,000 headaches added—is Charles (call me Chuck) Dressen, who now is serving a term as Brooklyn coach after doing his time as head man of Cincinnati Reds.

Chuck hasn't applied for the job, but the Cleveland bosses have been making inquiries in Brooklyn, particularly in the direction of Larry Macphail. They want to learn whether Chuck would be willing to take over the reformed cry-babies and see what makes them tick. Chuck asked for time to consider the offer.

May Be Youngest

FLT.-LT. DAVID JACOX

Flight Officer Young In Years

An Edmonton district boy is believed to be one of the youngest flight lieutenants in the R.C.A.F. He is David Jacox, 21, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. D. Jacox of the Fort Saskatchewan district. The airman is an instructor at Trenton, and made his first solo flight when he was 14.

At the time of his first solo, it was believed he was one of the youngest fliers in Canada.

According to friends he has been interested in aircraft all his life. When a lot younger, he built a model plane that won first prize at the Edmonton Boys' and Girls' Fair. He enlisted shortly after the outbreak of war and won his wings at Camp Borden.

Other Groups Favored At Agriculture Expense W. Pettinger Declares

Since the outbreak of war the farmers are the only group which has not been favored in some way or other by higher prices, William Pettinger, Calgary, field man for the Alberta Wheat Pool, told farmers at a mass meeting in the Empire theatre Thursday.

The meeting was called by the United Farmers of Canada (Alberta Section) for the purpose of protesting against discrimination that they claim exists against price of wheat. More than 700 farmers were in attendance.

Mr. Pettinger was asked by the chairman to introduce the four point resolution asking for a minimum price of $1 per bushel, f.o.b. for wheat sold. He outlined the four points in detail and asked that the meeting endorse them.

The present wheat situation in the west is the result of laxity of policy from as far back as 1918, Mr. Pettinger said. On numerous occasions members of the wheat pool asked the dominion government to institute a long term agricultural policy.

All such requests were turned down almost completely with the same excuse that their demands were not backed by the farmers as a body, he explained.

At this point he urged that the farmers get behind the leaders they elect to impress upon the federal authorities that their demands are united demands.

In regard to the contribution of the farmers to Canada's war effort Mr. Pettinger stated that financially their support has been as good, if not better than, any other group's.

George Bevington, Winterburn, was chairman of the morning session.

Ald. A. Bisset welcomed the farmers on behalf of the city and Hon. E. C. Manning, provincial secretary and minister of trade and industry, welcomed them on behalf of the provincial government.

RESOLUTION

The meeting resumed in the afternoon when discussions on the four points of the resolution continued. The resolution follows:

1. That the initial payment by the Wheat Board should be increased to $1 a bushel for One Northern wheat at the terminal.

2. That the stock of wheat represented by the carryover as at July 31, 1941, should be taken off the market and held as a national emergency war reserve.

3. That, as from August 1st, 1941, all sales of wheat should be credited to the crop year 1941-42.

4. That the crop year 1941-42 should be declared an emergency year under the terms of the Prairie Farm Assistance Act, irrespective of market prices prevailing.

Officials Unable Understand Call $40,551 Refund

Report from Ottawa that the federal government claimed a refund of $40,551 from Alberta for advances on unemployment relief could not be explained by provincial officials, Thursday.

C. M. Long, provincial auditor, said he thought all accounts in dispute had been cleared up. The Dominion had even complimented the province on the state of its accounts, he said.

A. A. Mackenzie, relief commissioner, said there was no such lump sum mentioned in any report to his department.

It was possible, they said, that the amount was a total of small adjustments between the Dominion and various municipalities, which are being made from day to day. In these cases the province usually acts as intermediary.

ROAD REPORT

A.M.A. Safety Slogan: Treat the other fellow as you would like to have him treat you.

Motorist Gets Stiff Term On Driving Count

Continuing a previously announced policy of heavier penalties in an effort to stem a mounting tide of reckless driving, Magistrate Millar Thursday sentenced a district farmer to three months in jail after he pleaded guilty to a charge of dangerous driving.

The accused, Peter Cherniwchan, of the Bellis district, was arrested Wednesday night after his car struck a parked auto in front of the Edmonton Motors Ltd. on 102 street and came to a stop in the East End of the city after climbing a curb.

A police officer stated accused had been drinking when found behind the wheel of his car.

Accused offered no explanation to the court before sentence was passed. The magistrate made no comment in passing sentence.

LICENSE SUSPENDED

In addition to the jail term, imposed without the option of a fine, the court ordered that Cherniwchan's driving license be suspended for a period of six months.

Rod Morrison, Moser Ryder block, reported his car, parked on the north side of 102 avenue, was struck by an eastbound car and pushed up on the sidewalk, late Wednesday.

Gordon Ingram, 10158 113 street, gave pursuit of the car allegedly responsible. Ingram drove east on 102 avenue to 96 street and then south to 101A avenue. Later Const. G. Reeder arrested a man found sitting in his car near the New Edmonton hotel on 97 street. The man gave his name as Peter Cherniwchan of Bellis.

TRUCKER ARRESTED

Martin Botiolfs of Egremont was also arrested on a dangerous driving charge after William Wyllie, York hotel, complained his car was damaged by a truck at 96 street and 104 avenue at 12:30 a.m. Thursday.

Botiolfs was fined $25 and costs with the alternative of 35 days in jail after he pleaded guilty to the charge in police court Thursday morning. He told the court he had never been in trouble previously. With the crown giving consent, accused was allowed 10 days in which to raise the money for the fine.

Wyllie told police the car was struck by a truck that backed into his auto, breaking a rear light and bending the body. The truck drove away but not before Wyllie caught the license number, he told police.

Const. Irvine later arrested Botiolfs, sitting in a truck in front of the C.P.R. building on Jasper avenue. Charged with dangerous driving he will appear in city police court Thursday morning.

TWO OTHERS FINED

Russell Boyko and Ernie Bounty, two other motorists who pleaded guilty to dangerous driving following minor accidents in the city, were each fined $20 and costs with options of 30-day jail terms. Boyko had an accident at 109 street and 103 avenue on October 28, while Bounty was in a collision at 88 street and 115 avenue on November 1.

Norman A. Wylie, 957 96 avenue, suffered a slight back injury when a small truck he was driving west on 102 avenue turned over following a collision at the 106 street intersection at 9:05 a.m. Thursday. H. W. Ross, 9907 101 street, was said by police to be driving a car north on 106 street that collided with the truck.

Durocher Balks At Yankee Uniform

HOLLYWOOD, Nov. 6—(CP)—Leo Durocher of Brooklyn has joined the growing ranks of baseball heroes who may—or may not—play a part in the forthcoming motion picture based on the life of Lou Gehrig.

Durocher was given a screen test Wednesday for a possible bit in the picture, but he balked at wearing a New York Yankee uniform which the studio had fitted for him.

The usually talkative manager of the "Bums" had no wise-cracks for the assembled cameramen, but the general impression was that he'd seen more than enough of the Yankee uniform in the recent world series.

Gehrig was the star first baseman for the mighty Yankees. He died last June.

As for wearing a New York uniform in the picture, Durocher said he'd take that up later—if he's in the picture.

Pepper Martin Likes Coast Job

OKLAHOMA CITY, Nov. 6—(AP)—Above the din of his barnyard zoo, Squire John Leonard "Pepper" Martin said today he was happy in the comparative quiet of the Pacific Coast League—far from the big leagues' baseball roar.

Since his highly satisfying debut as a Card farm manager at storied Sacramento to the final playoffs only to lose to Seattle—it was fair to inquire if he did not hanker for a return to the big noise.

"Let's get this straight," said Pepper, who still has a Southern reverse like he used to run bases. "The only way I can go back to St. Louis is as a manager.

"And put Billy down in big print —I'll never have any designs on the Cardinal job as long as Billy Southworth is there. He's the grandest guy in baseball."

Anyway, he said, he had lots of fun on the Coast, hit .318 in 99 games, and he likes baseball any place.

Signed By Bapcos

VICTORIA, Nov. 6—(CP)—Ivan Temple, manager of Victoria Bapcos in the Intercity Intermediate Hockey League, said last night that Gaelic Jones Seeley of Moose Jaw Millers, had been signed by Bapcos but the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association had ruled he was still a member of the Millers and would not play at the coast this season.

Storey Definitely Quitting Football

TORONTO, Nov. 6—(CP)—Decision of Red Storey, husky backfielder of Toronto Argonauts to quit the game, was definite last night when Manager Herb Boynton said that "Red preferred to play hockey and we didn't want to stand in his way."

Announcement of Storey's decision was made Tuesday night. The big Barrie, Ont., red-head, who starred in the 1938 Canadian rugby final against Winnipeg, said he would leave this week-end to play for Riverdale in the Toronto United States Amateur Hockey League.

Argonauts meet Roughriders at Ottawa Saturday in the first of a total-point home-and-home series for the Eastern Rugby Football Union.

Grimm Satisfied

MILWAUKEE, Nov. 6—(AP)—William Veeck, Milwaukee Brewer Baseball Club President, revealed yesterday that Charley Grimm, the team's manager, has been offered Sacramento to the final playoffs only to lose to Seattle—it was fair to inquire if he did not hanker for a return to the big noise.

"Let's get this straight," said Pepper, who still has a Southern reversation like he used to run bases. "The only way I can go back to St. Louis is as a manager.

"And put Billy down in big print —I'll never have any designs on the Cardinal job as long as Billy Southworth is there. He's the grandest guy in baseball."

Anyway, he said, he had lots of fun on the Coast, hit .318 in 99 games, and he likes baseball any place.

Boston Wins 5-0

OTTAWA, Nov. 6—(CP)—Boston Bruins kept their undefeated preseason record intact Wednesday night by outclassing Ottawa Senators of the Quebec Senior hockey league 5-0. It was the Bruins' fourth and final exhibition test before opening their National hockey league season against the Maple Leafs in Toronto Saturday.

Passes Test

CHARLOTTE, N.C., Nov. 6—(AP)—(Buddy) Lewis, star third baseman and outfielder of Washington Senators, passed his physical examination for appointment as a United States air corps cadet yesterday.

"I just decided I might as well be in the air corps as in the infantry," said Lewis, who said he expected to get a call from his draft board this month.

Landis Better

PETOSKEY, Mich., Nov. 6—(AP)—Baseball Commissioner K. M. Landis, 75, was discharged yesterday from hospital, where he was confined nearly a month with bronchial pneumonia, and left immediately for his home in Chicago.

Dr. Brent C. Burns, the attending physician, said Landis was in good physical condition.

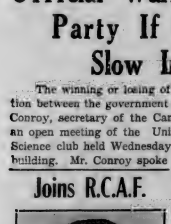
POLITICAL SCIENCE CLUB HEARS SPEAKER

Government And Labor Must Co-Operate For Victory

Official Warns New Party If Ottawa Is Slow In Taking Step

The winning or losing of this war depends on co-operation between the government and labor, declared Patrick Conroy, secretary of the Canadian Congress of Labor, at an open meeting of the University of Alberta Political Science club held Wednesday night in Room 142, Medical building. Mr. Conroy spoke on "Labor and the War."

Joins R.C.A.F.



Howard Wilson, soliciting passenger agent of the C. P. R. here, who has received an appointment with the rank of pilot officer in the Royal Canadian Air Force.

If the government takes no steps towards this co-operation, the C. C. of L. secretary warned, labor will have to form a political party of its own, and meet the situation.

Every effort has been made by labor to co-operate with the government, Mr. Conroy pointed out. At the outbreak of the present war, labor re-affirmed its stand, making clear its position, he said.

SECURITY FOR PEOPLE

This stand, the Canadian labor leader explained, includes economic security for people engaged in industry both "on" and "off the job", with unemployment, sickness and old age benefits.

Labor offered the government industrial councils made up of employers and labor representatives to settle difficulties, and also promised to "wipe out strikes for the duration" if first conditioned with fair wages and reasonable working conditions, Mr. Conroy said. The government was also offered the suggestion for a national co-ordination body to supervise production, he added.

The government didn't even condescend to answer the latter suggestion, Mr. Conroy declared, and went further to outlaw strikes, and institute measures without even consulting labor representatives.

WESTERN RESPONSE

Labor has been denounced as being wrong in these demands, irresponsible, and not particularly cooperative as far as the war effort is concerned, the labor organizer said.

Answering these charges Mr. Conroy presented figures to show that of the 11,000 trade unionists in Western Canada something like 270 had enlisted, half a million dollars for war savings certificates have been donated, together with $200,000 for war charities, and $600,000 in war bonds.

Mr. Conroy said that labor told the government that the war could only be fought with the co-operation of the mass of the people, and labor is the mass of the people.

Successful action in the field can only be had by mechanization in industry, the labor executive stated, and this can only be done by labor organization.

OPEN FORUM

Labor intends to maintain its self-respect, and to co-operate with any party or policy it chooses, so long as they are consistent with the welfare of the country, Mr. Conroy explained.

An open forum discussion period followed the address.

Ship Ahoy! Ditty Bags For Tars

Appeal of the Navy League for ditty bags for the sailors found a ready response among Alberta government employees. In the accompanying picture are representatives of various government departments holding 21 ditty bags which have been filled with assorted good things for the jolly Jack Tars. These represent contributions from the attorney general's, education, agriculture, public works, King's printer's, purchasing board, old age pensions, mechanical and highway traffic branches of the government. Value of the bags' contents range from $6 to $9. It will be noted that one bag has a sweater attached to the outside, while others have socks. At the back of the group, smiling, is Percy Plowman, chief messenger, who organized the drive to fill the bags. He erected a stand showing a sample bag and contents in the "well" under the dome of the buildings. Soon the departments and branches were filling bags and the 21, all filled to overflowing, have been turned over to the Navy League.

Insured Workers Do Not Have To Take Any Position Offered

Insured workers who lose their employment will not be required to accept any position which may be offered, according to William Carnill, manager of the Edmonton Employments and Claims office of the Unemployment Insurance Commission.

"It is a common misconception among workers that they must accept any position offered and if such a position is refused that they will be deprived of their rights to the payment of benefits during the time they are out of work," said Mr. Carnill.

"The act very definitely protects the worker against any attempt to force him to accept employment at a low standard of wages, or if the working conditions are less favorable than those recognized by good employers, or if vacancies are due to a labor dispute. He is also under no compulsion to accept employment which requires him to become a member of any association, organization or union of workers or, on the other hand, which requires him to refrain from becoming a member."

MAY APPEAL

Mr. Carnill stated that the act further provided that a man whose claim for benefit payment has been disallowed, may appeal to a board of referees made up of an equal number of representatives of employers and employees. Even if the board of referees disallows the claim, there is a further right given the worker that he may appeal to the umpire.

Rotary Told Of "Little Hitlers"

German people today serve and admire Hitler because he has the power to express their thoughts and actions (with fidelity), because, in effect, the vast majority of the German people are "little Hitlers," Mr. Justice G. B. O'Connor told the Rotary Club at its weekly luncheon at the Macdonald hotel Thursday.

In Britain and the nations of the democracies Nazism is not possible as the people of these democracies have fostered and cherished the free institutions of parliamentary speech, a free press and the other liberties won throughout the ages.

Introduced by S. A. Dickson, K.C., Mr. Justice O'Connor spoke on the "Humorous Side of Law." In introducing him, Mr. Dickson referred to his distinguished career at the Alberta bar, and told members that "it is a delight to practice before the junior member of the supreme court bench."

Mr. Justice O'Connor congratulated Edmonton on the remarkable response given to the Community Chest appeal. This response has been so generous, he stated, that Edmonton stood highest of all cities on the North American continent in the percentage over the quota subscribed.

Heroic "Jervis Bay" Inspires Merchant Marine Tag Nov. 15

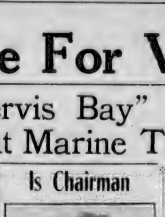
Subscribing whole-heartedly to the slogan "Nothing is too good for our merchant sailors," the Navy League of Canada is sponsoring a tag day on Saturday, Nov. 15, to raise funds for assistance of the merchant marine.

Arrangements are under supervision of George H. Steer, K.C., chairman of the Edmonton committee of the Navy League. Ronald Maitland and W. A. Hayley are committee members directly in charge of details for the event.

Sailors of the merchant marine have written a glorious chapter in the history of the British Empire. They have played their heroic part in this outstanding struggle. They have met with fortitude and courage the ceaseless attacks of the "raiderwolves" of the Atlantic—the Nazi U-boats—as they did in the First Great War.

The merchant marine rightfully can be considered the fourth arm of the nation's fighting services—the army, navy, air force and merchant marine.

Is Chairman



George H. Steer, K.C., chairman of the Edmonton Committee of the Navy League of Canada, which is holding a tag day on Saturday, Nov. 15.

The hazardous tasks daily carried out by the brave men who man the merchant ships are of paramount importance to the Empire and to all democracies.

RISK LIVES DAILY

They do their work without glorification and in many cases, with little recognition for the hazards they face. Risking their lives daily and constantly without respite, except for the short time they are in port on this side, these heroes are entitled, when on shore, to every consideration that can be shown them.

Many allied seamen are deprived of the ability to visit their loved ones at home. Many of the British seamen know, in their absence at sea, that their families have been destroyed and their families dispersed. During their sojourn on the other side, they get no rest, being subject to the dangers of bombing and the inconveniences of blackouts and frequently are obliged to stand by their ships without much leave.

The Navy League is taking efficient steps to provide comfort ashore for the men of the allied merchant navies. Through the medium of the Allied Merchant Navy Clubs which the Navy League is establishing in Halifax, Sydney and Montreal, some measure of comfort, rest and recreation will be assured both officers and seamen when their ships are in ports.

No finer example of the fact that in the battle of the Atlantic Nature lives again, can be found than the epic of the Jervis Bay. Outweighed and out-gunned, the Jervis Bay under Capt. Fogarty Fegan V.C., was protecting a convoy of 38 merchant ships carrying needed food to Britain.

A German pocket battleship hove in sight. The few five-inch guns of the Jervis Bay, and without armor for protection, were no match for the 11-inch guns and heavy protection of the pocket battleship.

"CLOSE WITH ENEMY."

As the pocket battleship was identified, Fegan gave the order immediately to "close with the enemy."

Capt. Fegan ordered "Keep her on." He and his valiant crew went down but 29 of the 38 ships reached port.

Getting Around with JOHN OLIVER

TRANSLATION into English of foreign names sometimes presents difficulties, both as regards pronunciation and spelling. While there is no great trouble in Englishing the Christian name of Joseph Stalin, Russian dictator, I am sure that he will not express any eloquent or verbose thanks to those who spell it "Josef". It is noted that a great many publications of various classifications tack "Josef" rather than "Joseph" in front of the surname.

In his own native tongue the Russian dictator is Iosif. This form is preserved in many libraries and other places where a practice is made of adhering as closely as possible to original forms of proper names. The English translation of Iosif is Joseph. That is the way Stalin appears in the British Who's Who, where the biographical notices are personally written and thus have the stamp of final authority. It may be of interest to know that this sketch of the Russian leader occupies just four lines.

The Inquiring Reporter

THE QUESTION

A report issued by the federal department of munitions and supply told of the elimination by the footwear section of the rubber industry of 45 per cent of the styles, colors and lines of modern footwear in order to reduce costs and to enlarge the scope of rubber conservation. Do you think you will still be able to manage alright?

THE ANSWERS

BOB CHAPMAN, businessman: I don't imagine the cut in footwear styles will cause any particular discomfort. The men on active service seem to be doing alright with just one style, cut and color of boot, so I guess the people on the home front will get along somehow.

GEORGE WILSON, gardener: I think the idea is very sound, but it should be carried farther than the realms of footwear. Why not cut out styles, cut out line of all civilian clothing. There should be a great saving in cloth and other material at this rate.

ELNIE SHORE, clerk: There are altogether too many styles in footwear nowadays anyway. When some people boast of large collections of shoes, all of different styles, then it is time some step was taken to reduce the collection.

Dorothy Dix Says:

Dear Miss Dix—I am a girl, 25 years old, intelligent and good-looking, and have the power of attracting men when I first meet them, but after two or three dates they lose interest and cease to date me. One boy, who gave me what he called "constructive criticism," told me that my trouble was that I took them and their attentions and everything else "too seriously." But how can I help taking things seriously when my parents have been so strict with me that they have never allowed me to dance or swim, or take part in the activities of other young people? I don't know how to play. Is there any way I can learn now?

Dorothy Dix

DESPERATE GIRL.

Answer—It is hard to change one's character after one is 25, and I shouldn't advise you to try to copycat some gay and vivacious girl who is popular with the boys. For imitations are poor things that never ring true, and a girl who tries to dress herself up in another girl's mannerisms and charms finds that they do not fit and that they make her look like a figure of fun instead of the glamour girl she thought she would be.

You must have seen many grotesque and pathetic illustrations of this. Sober and sedate girls, without a particle of humor in their systems, who painfully memorized wisecracks and funny stories that fell perfectly flat when they tried to get them off.

So I advise you not to try to change yourself into something different from what nature and your parents' training made you. Plenty of men have a horror of the little flibbertigibbety girls and admire nothing in a woman so much as restfulness and intelligence.

Of course, there is no reason for you not to learn to dance and swim. They are physical activities that are easily acquired and they will bring you in closer contact with a young group, for, after all, you cannot expect to run with the crowd unless you can do the things that it does.

What the young man meant in saying that you took things too seriously was probably to warn you that you scared boys off by reading meanings into their chatter and their attentions that they didn't put there. Boys don't expect girls to believe all the fulsome compliments and near-love-making that they give them. It is just a line when they call a girl "Miss Beautiful" and ask where she has been all this time that they have never met, and tell her that she is the one for whom they have been seeking, and so on and so forth.

A sophisticated girl merely laughs and kids along with the lad, and both enjoy the little play, but if the girl thinks that being taken to the movies a couple of times indicates that the boy has fallen in love with her and intends to ask her to marry him, he feels that his only safety is in keeping away from her.

Certainly the strict parents who think that they are protecting their daughters by never letting them play around with other young people in their teens do them a great and lasting injury, because it is in her schoolgirl days that a girl learns the technique of how to handle men and just how much to discount what they say and do.

Camp-Going Cake For Khaki-Clads

Reveille for any army appetite—a spicey, nutty, chocolate cake.

By MRS. GAYNOR MADDOX

Even the best soldiers are cake-eaters, especially when the cake comes out of the family kitchen. Here's a good one, and it will keep fresh no matter how far it must travel.

CAMP-GOING CAKE

Juice of 1 orange, water, grated rind of 1 orange, 2 cups seeded raisins, 1 cup brown sugar, 3 squares chocolate, 2 cups flour, ½ teaspoon baking powder, 1 teaspoon soda, ½ teaspoon salt, 1 teaspoon cinnamon, 1 cup toasted Brazil nuts rolled fine.

Add sufficient water to orange juice to make 1 cup. Add grated rind, raisins, brown sugar and chocolate; simmer together 3 minutes, stirring until chocolate is dissolved. Cool. Sift together all remaining ingredients except Brazil nuts; add to cooled chocolate mixture. Add Brazil nuts and mix well. Bake in long narrow loaf pans in slow oven (325 deg. F.) for 1 to 1¼ hours, until baked through.

TO TOAST AND ROLL BRAZIL NUTS

Heat oven to moderate temperature (350 deg. F.). Spread out shelled Brazil nuts on baking sheet or in shallow pan and allow to toast for 15 to 18 minutes. Remove from oven, cool, and crush with a rolling pin (press down on them gently at first to crush, then roll.) Toasting gives a special flavor.

A can of rich, keeping cookies from the old homestead will add a home touch in any army tent.

MINCEMEAT DROP COOKIES

(Makes 2½ Dozen)

One-quarter cup shortening, ½ cup sugar, 1 egg, 1 cup mincemeat, 1¼ cups sifted flour, 2 teaspoons phosphate baking powder, ¼ teaspoon salt.

Cream shortening, add sugar gradually, creaming until light and fluffy. Add egg and beat well. Fold in mincemeat. Sift flour, baking powder and salt together and add to creamed mixture, stirring until well blended. Drop by teaspoonfuls on greased baking sheet and bake in moderately hot oven (400 deg. F.) about 10 minutes.

Tomorrow's Menu

BREAKFAST: Baked apples, parsley omelet, wholewheat toast, coffee, milk.

LUNCHEON: Cream of potato soup, hard enriched rolls, sliced oranges and bananas, oatmeal cookies, tea, milk.

DINNER: Creamed codfish with hard-cooked eggs on toasted English muffins, parsley potatoes, broccoli, mincemeat drop cookies, fruit bowl, coffee, milk.

Army Life Is Attractive To C.W.A.C.

TORONTO, Nov. 6.—(CP)—The time and the place—a day in the recruiting office of the Canadian Women's Army Corps. The girls—plenty of them, some young and petite, others just "around 20"; some stoutish, some slim: girls in uniform, girls in slacks and girls in dresses.

But there's an objective common to all—enlistment in the "army"; war service with uniforms; regimentation, discipline.

There may be a dozen at a time in the dingy little waiting room. They await an interview with the recruiting officers. The half-expectant, half-doubtful look on their faces is not necessarily a feminine characteristic. One can see it in any recruiting office, for either men or women.

The pleasant young girl who might be called a receptionist smiles at each one and shows her where to go when her turn comes. As the applicant enters the inner sanctum she invariably turns around and looks at those remaining with a "Well-here-I-go" expression. No sooner is a seat vacated than another hopeful-looking applicant comes up the stairs to take her place.

Make no mistake about it, they all want, more than anything else in the world, to be in the army, doing their share like their men-folk.

NURSE TO MECHANIC

Take, for instance, the two eager young women who motored 200 miles from another city to join the C.W.A.C. Florence is the daughter of a speed car racer and is no laggard with a car herself. She knows all about the "innards" of a car—any car—having taken a motor mechanics course with honors. She already trains mechanics for the Red Cross.

Her friend, Vera, is a nurse but wants to be a mechanic. "I've taken care of people long enough, now I want to take care of cars. They, at least, don't talk back," she says. Vera was born in England but has lived for 21 years on this side of the Atlantic. "I've been trying to get overseas or to help in some way here ever since the war started," she says. "Now maybe I'll have a chance."

Over in one corner is blond young Dorothy from the northern Ontario mining country. She wants to be a waitress in the army. She has never been in the big city before and had difficulty in locating lodgings here. "But I guess you have to be pretty resourceful to get into the army so I just walked and walked until I found a boarding house," she says.

Some of the girls gave up good jobs to enter the army. There's a driver from the Red Cross in another city, for instance, who was also chief dietician at a big club. Her husband is in the army.

SERGEANT'S OPINION

Several of the waiting girls didn't know where they would sleep for the night. They come from various provincial towns. Their bags and suitcases were piled against one wall. Ask Sgt. T. W. Brand what he thinks of the girls and he'll say enthusiastically "They will make great material for the army, they're all so keen about it." The sergeant is on loan to the C.W.A.C. for the purpose of instructing in administration and orderly room technique. "But the girls are so good already they don't really need me any more," he says—a bit gallantly perhaps.

London M.P. Declares Women Fit For Home Guard Service

LONDON, Nov. 6. — (AP) — Dr. Edith Summerskill, Labor member of parliament, is fighting mad. She says Britain would raise an army of women to defend their homes if invasion comes.

But the war office says—just as definitely—women will not be enrolled in the home guard and nothing will be done to attract women to it, even in non-combatant capacities.

The unofficial view is whispered, however, that the urgent need for manpower makes it idle to say the question of women in the home guard is definitely and finally out.

Dr. Summerskill, 40-year-old physician, is going to town before a Letchworth audience Sunday on her favorite topic.

She has proved her own prowess by scoring seven bull's eyes in her first 10 shots on the House of Commons rifle range and has announced she will put volunteer instructions within reach of girls' groups.

"In the north of England mock invasion last week," she exclaimed, "they actually asked for 1,000 women to pretend to be hysterical. That's just like the war office.

"I simply staggered when I heard of it, for the heavy German raids have shown that hysterical women simply do not exist any more. Women in the services can do other things besides being cooks, clerks, typists and telephonists.

"It is ridiculous to say how wonderful the Russian women are and at the same time expect our women, who number more than half the whole population, to hide in cellars. . . .

"Mind you, I don't believe women in the army would be good if they were on the offensive. They wouldn't have their heart in it. They're too constructive and they have not the aggressive instinct of men.

"But on the defensive, fighting for their homes and children, they would be absolutely ideal and, therefore, I think there should be a reserve of women who, if Britain should be invaded, would know how to handle a rifle."

Jumper Ensemble Is Vivacious

Going places . . . this jolly jumper ensemble with its little Scotch bonnet to match! Anne Adams designed Pattern 4846 for the active junior crowd. There's a V-necked, front-buttoned jumper, whose bib-like bodice continues as a panel in the skirt. The same effect is repeated in the back. The side sections of the skirt, which has no side seams, are cut on the bias. If you like, the jumper may be snap-fastened down the front, using buttons for trim. The contrast blouse has a little Peter Pan collar and long or short sleeves. Add the big bow at the neck, unless you use a high round neckline on the jumper. This ensemble is finished quickly with the Sewing Instructor's help.

Pattern 4846 is available in girls' sizes 6, 8, 10, 12 and 14. Size 10, jumper and cap, takes 1¾ yards 54 inch fabric and blouse, 1½ yards 39 inch fabric.

Your Baby And Mine

by MYRTLE MEYER ELDRED

Parents are loath to sit on the sidelines and watch their children's friendships go on the rocks. Just as they feel they must interfere when their children make disastrous alliances with undesirable children, they now want to do something to prevent the break-up of a nice friendship.

Yet, what can a parent do? The child has been subject to the family's best influences and if his interests are harnessed by undesirable companions, or the interest in desirable ones fade, parental admonitions won't do much good. In fact, the chances are that they will make the child angry, because his own good judgment is being critized.

Even when the companion is a cherished one there is nothing much the family can do about it.

Mrs. F. says that since his kindergarten days her son and another little boy have been inseparable and true companions. They are now in sixth grade and recently, out of a clear sky, the other child treats him as if he were a stranger and is polite but not friendly.

"In the past two years," writes this mother and ask her if she number of clubs together and have attended school picnics together and have done everything we could to promote the friendship. Should I do anything now? Should I call this mother and ask her if she knows what has happened to our boys, or should I get the boys together and talk to them? Or, should I just take it for granted that the other boy has become tired of my boy and let it go at that?"

The last is the sensible conclusion. Nothing has happened. You haven't at any time done anything to discourage this friendship so obviously it must have died of its own accord.

The other boy is probably in a stage of development not yet reached by your son. When your son arrives at it their friendship may be resuscitated. If not, there is nothing that can be done.

Try to interest your boy in other boys and help him to be philosophical about his loss. It is not unusual for good friends to drift, but it is a most natural happening. Parents can't transplant a friendship nor destroy it. Children know better than we the reason for whim, friendliness thrives.

Our leaflet, "Children's Quarrels", deals with the relationships of younger children. Send a three-cent-stamped, self addressed envelope for the leaflet. Address your request to Myrtle Meyer Eldred, in care of this newspaper.

PATRIOTIC COLORS

If you want to modernize your bedroom, you can do it in a flash with a new dressing table ensemble of bold, clear red, white and blue for a slipcovered mirror, picture frames and dressing table skirt will transform any frowsy-looking bedroom. With modern sewing machine attachments it's an easy matter to make a lampshade to match, trimmed with regimental-looking cotton cord. Dressing table skirt hems are turned up and finished in a few minutes, if you use the adjustable hemmer. And you'll find that corded, pleated and ruffled trimmings are easy to accomplish. If you use the corded fold, pleated and ruffler attachments. For the mirror and pictures, the front width of the slipcover frame is determined more or less by the width and size of the original frame.

Your Figure, Madame!

By IDA JEAN KAIN

There's nothing that makes you want to go on with your diet like hearing about someone else who has finished what you are starting. She is apt to be so delighted with the final outcome that you can't do anything but take heart and get your second wind.

You feel more hopeful when a finished reducer writes that: "In June of 1940, I purchased a bicycle. At that time, I weighed 180 pounds in my height of five feet, two inches. At least, that is what I thought my height was.

So, determined to lose, I purchased a bicycle and gave up entirely the use of a car or a trolley. When I wanted to go anywhere I rode my wheel or walked. Consequently, I made my dietary changes strictly according to the calorie method, and the system of providing a food assortment—fruits, vegetables and proteins gathered from your daily articles.

"But, of course, your readers are mainly interested in results. Over a period of 10 months, I affected considerable changes for the better. My size 42 dress diminished to 14, and new measurements as follows: bust, 34 inches; waist, 28 inches; hips 35 inches. As the same time, brought my weight from 180 pounds to 130 pounds—and, oddly enough, discovered that my actual height was like fact three! Perhaps the relief from sagging overweight is the explanation."

That is one story of weight reduction. Here's another:

"I weighed 235 pounds and am now down to 185. But I have the use of an electric bicycle and now that working for a food for six weeks, I am only hardened up. I measure the same." And the answer to that is: Fewer candies and more gentle exercise. There's no exercise yet invented that can cancel the number it is possible to get in one course of a single meal or in one between-meal course.

As a final note: someone writes "I have kept, on your diet for the past two and have lost 20 pounds I think a number of I keep track of all meals and the number of calories consumed at each. So I have a small notebook in which these are listed daily. This idea helped me. Perhaps it will help someone else."

How well you make out with your diet and your exercises depends on you. You may not have to watch your calories so scrupulously, but you may have to watch your calisthenics more than intimated. The whole business is up to you.

Even the Busiest Lady Can Grow These Plants

Decoration for All the House

You'd love to decorate your home with plants, but you haven't time to take care of them? Many beautiful plants take care of themselves. In almost any spot, one or another will thrive.

Sprays of Chinese evergreen and philodendron grow in a low water-filled bowl, make a lovely centre-piece for your table. Just rinse bowl and add fresh water once a week.

Dracaena, tall, with variegated foliage, does well even where there's little direct sunlight—near a fireplace or on a stairway landing. So does sansevieria which grows for months without drainage.

Watering pails, of course, require more attention, but are not too exacting. The astilbe will put forth masses of feathery pink blossoms if you'll just give it lots of water.

Jerusalem cherry is cheerful with its red fruit; asks only sunlight and protection from drafts and gas.

It's easy to brighten your home with plants! Our 32-page booklet describes simple care of many lovely foliage and flowering house plants, including azalea, flowering maple, cyclamen. Tells how to grow vines, ferns, bulbs.

Send 10c in coin for your copy of "Making Plants and Flowers Grow Indoors" to The Edmonton Bulletin Home Service, 60 Front St., W., Toronto, Ont. Be sure to write plainly your name, address, and the name of booklet.

Thick, luxuriant hair is like many other blessings—not fully appreciated until it begins to depart. A good head of hair improves the appearance to such an extent that it is certainly worth spending a short time each day to keep it.

When the hair first begins to thin out and you notice that the comb and brush are filled with hairs that have been lost, that is the time to strengthen that which remains if you wish to prevent baldness later.

Some of the tonics offered to regrow hair are useless. A tonic is beneficial to the extent that it removes scaling and that this massage is often helpful to the hair.

The cause of falling hair will usually be found in the blood-stream. In the first place, the blood must contain the element out of which hair is made and in the second place, the blood must circulate freely to the scalp. Hair is built up of the same elements as the bones and nails and these elements can only be derived from foods which contain the organic minerals—such as spinach, celery, asparagus, carrots and all the other succulent non-starchy vegetables. These will be found most helpful in the raw state. Unless you have seen the hair improve with a change in diet you might not believe it possible but with the feeding of the raw vegetables the hair often gains a richness of strength and vitality and thrives abundantly.

Those breeders who raise fine horses frequently give the animals carrots for the purpose of producing a fine, glossy coat and it appears that the same method of feeding will also improve human hair.

To expect the blood to produce a vigorous growth of hair without providing it with the necessary minerals is as unreasonable as the story in the Bible about making bricks without straw.

If you want a fine growth of hair having the gilded queen so much admired, then you must feed your hair. First feed the blood stream the vital minerals and the blood will then feed the necessary minerals to the hair roots.

In causing the blood to circulate more freely through the scalp, the following measures will be found helpful: Rubbing, pinching, kneading, brushing, pulling, the use of the ultra violet ray light, and the application of ice. The ice treatment is one which is simple enough to be given easily at home and is often productive of good results.

In addition to these purely local measures, affecting the scalp alone, it will be found that the following exercises would improve the health of the hair simply because exercise stirs up a better blood circulation and this active circulation rushes to the scalp along with the other parts of the body.

Remember, each hair root must be bathed in blood to grow properly. It is nearly always true that to get at the root of your hair trouble you must begin with the roots of your hair.

If your hair is failing out, this fixture was the best Bad and Best properly nourished or that the circulation to the scalp is defective. In practically every case, these causes can be corrected. Furthermore, as you begin to feed the hair by feeding the bloodstream the minerals it needs, you will be surprised to find your health improving as the hair becomes longer and stronger, for the same materials needed for hair growth will be useful in securing increased health.

All questions regarding Health and Diet will be answered. Large, stamped, self-addressed envelope must be enclosed. Write on one side of paper only. Letters must not exceed 150 words. Address McCoy Health Service, 1151 West 6th St., Los Angeles, Calif.

Points For Parents

Father: "We'll put your wagon away and not play with it for a week because you forgot and left it in the driveway again."

Father: "Jack, come here and get your wagon or I'll run over it. How many times have I told you not to leave it in the driveway!"

Prohibiting the use of toys for awhile that have been left out of place, is much more effective than fault-finding or scolding.

Debunker

When people see common house flies walking on the ceiling, they often remark that this is accomplished by means of vacuum suckers on the flies' feet. This is not true at all, as any one can discover for himself by putting a fly's foot under a microscope. A fly's foot is made up of a pair of tiny hooks and a pair of soft pads. The pads are covered with microscopic hairs which secrete a sticky fluid. It is this fluid which makes it possible for the fly to walk on ceilings and walls without falling. It also helps leave flyspecks.

McKenney On Bridge

By WM. E. McKENNEY, America's Card Authority

EDITOR'S NOTE: In this series of articles the writer is not advocating the "V. V." system. In keeping with his policy to present anything new to his readers, the various details of this system are presented for their information, so that if and when they play against the system they may have an adequate defense against it.

By WILLIAM E. McKENNEY

First let us discuss the original bid of two of a suit, one of the most frequently used weapons of the Van Vleck system. Unlike the two-bids of other systems, it is not forcing. It is purely a pre-emptive bid, and as a matter of fact is often made with a very weak hand, for instance one containing nothing but six to the jack.

Now of course his partner must make one of several possible decisions; and the basis of his response is outlined below:

(a) With weakness in the original two-bidder's suit and a very good suit of his own, as shown in hand No. 1, he should bid his suit.

(b) With a strong hand on which he has the expectation of going to game, even though he knows his partner's bid is very weak, he should make the forcing bid of two no trump. This will get him additional information relative to the original bidder's holding. With a very poor hand, the original bidder will rebid three of his suit. If his hand is fairly strong and he wishes to encourage his partner, he will respond with three of another lower ranking suit.

(c) With the knowledge that the original two-bid is weak, he should pass a good hand if he can see no game in sight, especially if he has defence against possible bids by the opponents.

(d) With a hand so weak that he knows the opponents are bound to come into the bidding, he should take some action that may prove upsetting to the opponents.

(e) If the original bid has been two clubs or two diamonds and the responding hand would like to try for three no trump, he may bid three clubs in response to two clubs, or three diamonds in response to two diamonds, as an invitation to the original bidder to go to three no trump if the original two-bid was made with a good hand.

Here are some examples of the system in action. South as dealer has bid two hearts, and West has passed. Holding hand No. 1, North should bid two spades, with hand No. 2, two no trump; with hand No. 3, pass.

Now suppose that North has bid two no trump. Karl passes. South, having opened with two hearts, and holding hand No. 4, must respond with three hearts; holding hand No. 5, three clubs.

Futures Ease On Winnipeg Market

WINNIPEG, Nov. 6.—(CP)—Wheat futures on Winnipeg Grain Exchange eased fractionally in dull trading today with final values ⅛-¼ lower, December at 73⅞ cents, May 77½ and July 78⅝.

Minor local and outside purchases provided bulk of wheat operations and market experts could neither trace export dealings in wheat or flour nor mill purchases.

WEEKLY LIVESTOCK REPORT

Report from Edmonton stockyards for the week ending Nov. 1:

Receipts—	Cattle	Calves	Hogs	Sheep
Saturday	315	49	294	41
Week	2837	523	3330	532

No undue activity on the cattle market throughout the past week. Receipts have been plentiful, but decidedly lacking in quality. There are too many plain cattle arriving, and farmers with feed are advised to hold their stock. Barely sufficient good butchers to test the market. The high price for the week was $9¼, paid for 10 choice steers. Cows and bulls fairly steady; bulk of good cows selling from $5¼ to $5¾, with the odd heiffery kinds topping $6¼, bulls from $4¾ to $6½. The following are the quotations:

Good to choice fed calves $9 to $9½; good to choice butcher steers $7¾ to $8¼, fair to medium $7 to $7½, common to fair $4½ to $7; good to choice heiffers $7½ to $8, fair to medium $6½ to $7¼, common to fair $4½ to $6½; good light cows $5½ to $6¼, good heavy cows $5 to $5¾, common to medium $3½ to $5; canners and cutters $2½ to $3½; bulls $4½ to $6½.

Stockers and feeders of good quality sold from $6 to $7, but the bulk of receipts were plain and hard to move, some selling as boners. Good stock heiffers from $6 down, and bulk of stock sows $4½ down.

Veal calves unchanged. Good handy weights selling from $8 to $9, with a few really choice topping $10; heavy and common kinds graded close, from $3 to $7.

Hogs steady and unchanged, with basic for shipment quoted at $13.60, plants $13¼ to $13.40. Sows sold live weight on the stockyards from $6 to $7 per cwt. A carcasses received a premium of $1 per carcass, and C 1's discounted $1 per carcass.

Lamb market steady and unchanged, with good to choice handy weights $8 to $9, with tops off cars $9¼. Yearlings quoted from $6 down, and ewes $4 down.

GUIDE

Active Forces Are Entertained

Entertaining the men of the armed forces stationed in Edmonton, a concert group under direction of Mrs. Dick MacDonald gave a performance in the Canadian Legion War Services hut, Portage avenue, on Wednesday evening.

The program will be repeated on Sunday, Nov. 16, in the Public Services Y.M.C.A. Hostess Club, preparatory to monthly concerts being presented by the group.

Vocal solos were presented by Norma Madill, Myrna Hirtle, Vernist Christie and Dick Ball, accompanied by Jessie Armstrong and Pat Conroy. Jimmy Dent gave comedy readings, accompanied by Sam Hichon.

Scotch dances and Irish jigs were presented by Betty Calrney, Ella Davidson, Jean Dobbie and Jessie Steart, with Bill Locke as piper. Contests were arranged for the soldiers and cigarettes were distributed. Comedy sketches were also presented by Jack Unwin, Bill Mitchell, Jack Delaney, Vernist Christie and Miss Billie MacDonald. Mrs. MacDonald and Miss Billie MacDonald were in charge of make-up.

Record For Tax Payments Seen

A new high in Edmonton tax collection is predicted for 1941 by City Comptroller John Hodgson, who anticipates that the all-time record collection of 113.8 made in 1928 will be equalled if not exceeded this year.

Collections to the end of October this year were up to the 115 per cent. mark of the $2,828,340 levy proportion for the ten-month period. Last year tax collections totalled 111 per cent. of the levy, which mark might well be considered a record as the 1928 record collection was based on gross land sale price and was included in the 1928 total, while in the 1940 total only the cash actually received was credited to tax account.

Tram Traffic At October Record

Traffic on Edmonton's street railway during October this year reached the highest mark that month since the street railway started operating, Thomas Ferrier, street railway superintendent, stated Thursday.

During October, 1,517,969 fares were collected, an increase of 212,762 over the corresponding month last year. Total fares sold up to the end of October, 1941, were 13,744,051, an increase of 646,164 over the same period last year.

Appointed To L.C.B.

Roy Elmhurst, secretary to Premier Hepburn, has been appointed deputy commissioner of the Ontario liquor control board.

Through The Mill

The minuet is the ultimate of beauty and grace in things terpsichorean. But it has been truly written there is a time and place for all things.

In the ballroom the minuet is a delight to the eyes. On the street, after some pretty wooxy auto-driving, it is apt to land the dancer in the jug.

And that's what it did for the chap in city police court Wednesday when he was sentenced to serve thirty weeks in jail after pleading guilty to operating a car while under the influence of liquor. His driver's license also was cancelled for the remainder of the license year.

According to a police officer accused had narrowly avoided a couple of accidents and had just missed hitting a constable by a foot or two. Furthermore, according to the officer, accused had failed to stop when he shouted at him to do so.

"When accused got out of the car and started to walk, he crossed and recrossed the line in 18 paces in one direction and twice in 18 paces in the other direction," the officer stated.

The court refused a plea for leniency.

A young man convicted of contributing to the delinquency of a young girl was sentenced to three months in jail.

Draft Agreement On Alberta Taxes Is Received Here

Copies have been received of the proposed draft agreement between the Dominion and provincial governments whereby the former will take over for the duration of the war the entire income and corporation taxation fields, according to Hon. Solon E. Low, provincial treasurer.

Mr. Low stated that, as soon as convenient after the return from the southern part of the province of Premier William Aberhart, it would be discussed by the cabinet.

Airwomen Will Receive Course Cooking School

Eight women from the Edmonton district left Wednesday night for Toronto, where they will take a course in cooking at the C.W.A.A.F. school there. On successful completion of the course they will be attached to various R.C.A.F. centres.

The women are Misses E. M. Williamson, Sexsmith; J. R. Harman, Minnehik; J. E. Thompson, Lacombe; E. A. Norris, Camrose, and G. E. Nicol, Manville.

Three Edmonton women were included in the list. They are Miss E. M. Stone of the Bellamy block; Miss S. V. McKee, 10620 85 avenue; Miss M. R. Johnston, 7337 104 street.

Edmonton Is Top Supporter In Chest Drive

No city on the North American continent stepped Edmonton's showing in the Community Chest drive just completed, according to a statement received Wednesday from Miss Charlotte Whitton, director of the Canadian Welfare council.

Figures released at the chest headquarters Wednesday showed that over 10,000 subscribers contributed $100,000 into the fund. Objective set by campaign officials at the beginning of the drive was $84,700.

The amount subscribed is over 16 per cent above the set objective and according to Miss Whitton is the highest figure over the objective reached by any city in North America. Her office had received totals from over 100 cities and the two nearest to Edmonton's showing were Austin, Texas, and Lynn, Mass., who went about 13 per cent over.

Getting Around

name. Whatever may have been the relationship over the years, its dollars to doughnuts that Stalin doesn't care for the Germans today and they don't appear to be fond of him. It would be the same today as many other earlier Russian names that came to us by way of Germany and still linger on. In some cases the names in popular use, have been purged of the Germanic influence, but in others they still struggle under excess letterage.

A striking example is the composer Peter Ilych Tchaikovsky. Often this name appears Tschaikowsky, thereby revealing the fact that it has been handled by the Germans on its way to us. Even today several music publishers and one large gramaphone company doing business in this country retain the spelling Tschaikowsky. The public can hardly be blamed for adhering to this perverted treatment when they see reputable business houses do it.

Yet Grove's Dictionary of Music and Musicians, the world's recognised court of final appeal on matters musical, uses the spelling Tchaikovsky. The great composer's biography, written by his brother, Modeste, also spells it Tchaikovsky. Programs of the New York Philharmonic, Boston, Chicago, Philadelphia, Queen's Hall and other great orchestras similarly spell it, as do leading newspapers such as the Manchester Guardian and London Times in England and the New York Times, Herald-Tribune and others on this side of the Atlantic.

A few years ago the BBC made an effort to have the spelling changed to Chaikovsky, to get it nearer the recognized pronunciation. This campaign has not yet been successful. Another German perversion of a Russian name is that of the great playwright whom the world knows well as Anton Tchekhow. But he is simply Anto Chekhov in the English language. But in regard to Stalin, there are no two ways about it. He is Joseph and not Josef.

Education Officer Of Air Force Here

R.C.A.F. Education Officer F/O. Dr. J. G. Falconer assumed his duties at the air force recruiting centre in the Provincial building Wednesday. A former High school teacher at Chilliwack, B.C., the officer has just completed a course at Toronto and will be attached to the local depot until further notice.

His work will include advising upprospective air force recruits as to their best capabilities in the various air force services. It will be his job to decide whether or not the air force will educate a man to bring him up to the standard required for the air crew departments.

U.S. Participation In War Proposed By Teachers' Paper

An article entitled "This War and America," prepared by the board of editors of "Frontiers of Democracy," a publication of the Progressive Educational Association of America, appears in the November issue of the Alberta Teachers' Association magazine.

The key of the whole article is the following statement: "We advocate full responsible participation on the part of the United States in the democratic struggle against the Axis to the extent, if necessary, of actual entrance in the war."

The decision is based essentially on an estimate of the consequences for the future of civilization entailed by the present struggle and not on an assessment of the national histories and events which may have caused it, the preamble reads.

Pipe Band Concert

Operating From Secret Bases, U.S. Air Patrols Keep Atlantic Sea Lanes Open

COMFORTING SIGHT—Out over the Atlantic on his "beat" that covers a big chunk of ocean for the U.S. Atlantic Air Patrol, Pilot Officer E. D. Minner is shown at the controls of his flying boat, while beneath is a United States battleship speeding along on patrol duty.

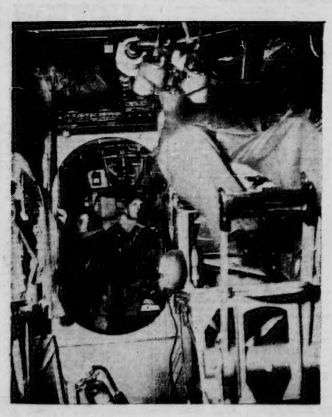
UNDER THE PROTECTIVE WINGS of giant U.S. flying boats a convoy, made up of scores of ships, is seen making its way across the Atlantic. Duties of these American patrol planes is to keep a protective watch over such convoys as literally come under their wings.

OFF ON A DAWN PATROL—The crew of a U.S. navy patrol plane is shown in a motor sailer as the men left the plane tender to board their big flying boat scheduled to take off on a routine patrol of their Atlantic "beat."

TRACKING THEIR EAGLES—Back at the secret base from where the Atlantic patrol operates, executive officers keep track of the position of their patrol planes.

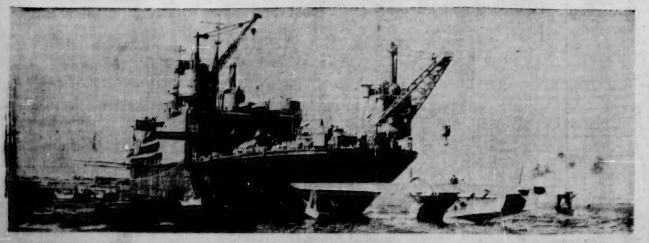
BEARDED PATROL MEN, such as these two pictured lighting a cigarette are responsible in a large measure for the safety of convoys carrying vital war supplies across the Atlantic.

ATLANTIC CHOW TIME—Crew members of the Atlantic patrol do their own cooking over an electric stove. It must be eaten quickly, for it cools off fast.



LOOKING AMIDSHIPS—The radio and navigation section of one of the planes of the U.S. Atlantic patrol is seen here. Feet belong to the two pilots.

REMINISCENT OF A CLASSROOM—Pilots of the Atlantic patrol are shown aboard a seaplane tender, at the secret base, whence they operate as they receive their assignments for the morrow—routes, time of take-offs and destinations where they will meet the convoys.



MOTHER AND CHICKS—A seaplane tender is shown with a number of patrol planes on her stern deck and still another being hoisted aboard for an overhaul at the secret base from which the patrol operates.

BACK FROM PATROL—After a 12-hour flight one of the many "Catalinas" of the U.S. Navy Atlantic patrol lands beside the mother ship, cutting a wake of salt sea spray.

Daughters Who Dare

By Rob Eden

JUNE RANDOLPH has been forbidden by her father to see her brother who recently was released from prison after serving time for signing a bad cheque. June, however, is eager to help him. She jets him use her car. When he returns it she finds stolen jewels in it. She buries them but later returns for them, hoping she and Eddie can bring the real thieves, Muggy Barker's gang to justice. June's fiance, ROY LAUGHTON, shares her father's opinion of Eddie. Eddie's other friend is his fiancee, DOLLY JARVIS. Barker, whose gang planted the jewels in June's car, have given her a week to produce the jewels. Meanwhile, her father learns she has been seeing Eddie and orders her to leave home. Her Aunt Mary is sympathetic with her. June goes to Dolly's apartment. Muggy Barker calls her, and telling her he knows where Eddie is, insists that she attend the races with him the following day. She goes to Roy's office in a good humor but soon becomes disturbed when she returns his ring and calls off their engagement. June goes to Kensington park, where she had buried the jewels, to search for them in daylight. Thwarted because of persons in the park, she returns to Dolly's apartment where she recognizes the car of TOD HAMES, a young man who frequently has befriended her.

"You're much too lovely to be working in anybody's office," Tod insisted. "I've got the solution for you—you'll marry me. You must know that I love you, and every day I love you more and more."

CHAPTER XXIV.

"TOD!" June exclaimed. "I'm so happy to see you! But what brings you here?"

"I wrangled this address out of your aunt as soon as I heard what had happened. I've been here ever since, waiting for you. I'm afraid I've imposed on Miss Jarvis, but—"

"No imposition at all," Dolly broke in. "Any friend of June's is a friend of mine, and welcome. This is her home now, anyway," and diplomatically excused herself.

"I can't understand how the news got around so fast," the girl remarked. "Everybody in town seems to know that I was invited to leave home. Why I heard it from a nurse maid in Kensington Park a short time ago."

"Bad news travels fast, my dear. But of course you wouldn't know that. You've never had the experience before."

"I've certainly made up for lost time today," June laughed. "First I lose my home, my fiance and then my friends show indications of treating me like a leper."

"What's that you said about your fiance?" Tod demanded, eagerly. "Do you mean Roy ran out on you?"

"Well—not exactly. I thought it only fair to offer him back his ring—"

"And he took it?"

June spread the fingers of her left hand.

"You don't see it, do you?"

"Why the—" Tod gulped, and then went on. "Who am I to be calling a dumb dodo like that names! He's made me the happiest man in the world!"

Tod's handsome face was wreathed with smiles.

"But I'm holding up the procession. Get slicked up a bit if you want to, as I'm taking you to dinner. Then we can talk our arms off."

June realized that she had gone without lunch. She suddenly realized she was hungry.

"It won't take me long," she promised.

"You know, June," Tod said, after they had ordered, "I want to help you. Do you want a job? I'm sure I can get something for you. I'll inquire among my friends."

"You're grand to think of it, Tod. But I can't take a job right now. I've got some things that I must do, first."

"You sound worried. Why don't you tell me what's bothering you? Perhaps I can help. I'll at least try my very best."

CONFIDENCE IN TOD

June was tempted to tell him the whole story, the background of the predicament into which she had become entangled. She was certain she could trust him. She had a feeling of confidence with Tod she never had experienced in all the time she had known Roy. But she knew she had no right to involve Tod in her troubles. She'd wait and see what happened.

"Aren't you afraid of Dad? If he finds out you're seeing me?" she countered. "He might cancel your contract for the factory alterations."

"No one can dictate to me whom I see or what friends I have," Tod answered. "If your father is small enough to let personal matters interfere with business, that'll be my hard luck. I won't change."

"I don't want to get you into any mixup, just because I've got myself in one."

"What are you doing tomorrow, then? How about going to the races with me?"

"I'd love to, Tod, really I would, but I've got a date with Muggy Barker. It's what you might call a command performance."

Tod's face lost its smile. He was serious for the first time since she had known him.

"It's as bad as that, is it?" he asked, finally.

"I'm afraid it is."

"Will money do any good? I can lend you as much as I've got. If it's more, I can get it for you."

"Thanks, Tod. I appreciate your kindness tremendously, but I don't need money, yet. I have some things I can dispose of for ready cash—things I don't care to keep, anyway. Besides, when I get straightened out I'll have a small income, enough to keep me going until I find a job."

"I—I wish you'd let me take care of you," he said, suddenly, leaning across the table and taking her hands in his.

"You're much too nice to get involved with me, right now, Tod." There was a suspicion of tears in the corners of her eyes. "You've got your career to think of and I'm in a dangerous hole. From the way several of my so-called friends have already behaved, I can see that I'm not going to be very popular with anyone."

"I don't care what people may think, it won't make the slightest difference in my love for you."

"Everyone I've tried to help, seems to have suffered as a result," the girl said. "I could never forgive myself if I hurt you, too."

"Just what do you plan to, do besides living with Dolly Jarvis, if it's a fair question?"

"I don't exactly know what I'll do. Dad offered me tickets to California and an allowance, but I would have had to leave right away. I turned that down."

"I'm glad of that. Have any definite plans, at all?"

SITUATION

"There is a ... situation that I must clear up first. Once that is taken care of, then I'll have to sit down and figure out what is to be done. I thought I might go to business college long enough to learn stenography. I type fairly well already. I've always handled my own correspondence, and I've had a typewriter ever since I was a child."

"You're much too lovely to be working in anybody's office," Tod insisted. "I've got the solution for you—you'll marry me, we'll build a little home which I'll design—with suggestions from the lady of the house, of course—and live happily ever after. You must know that I love you, and every day I love you more and more."

"I'm sorry, Tod," June answered softly. "You don't know how tempting it is. But I've got this situation to clean up before I have any right to think about myself."

"Do you love me?" he demanded.

"I'm answering no more questions, either," she evaded.

"Then, won't you please reconsider and let me help you? I might be able to clear up your situation, as you so cryptically refer to it, in no time at all. I know I could if I thought you really loved me."

FRIENDSHIP

"You're a very dear friend, Tod. I'm flattered more than I can tell you by just having your friendship. Everything else will have to wait."

"You're an evasive little minx. Anyway, you haven't said you don't love me. I'll be content with that, young lady, but not for long."

Later at the door she said.

"Good night," she said at the door, "and a million thanks for everything. It's good to have a friend."

"I'll see you at the races, tomorrow," he answered.

What To Do

The best way to keep your sterling silver gleaming and beautiful is to use plenty of "elbow grease." Actually polish the silver and don't be tempted to save time and effort by using boiling water in an aluminum container with salt or soda. This method gives your silver a very flat look, and if you continue to use it you will find the silver will have to be constantly gone over to get back that blue white gleam of sterling.

There is a preparation on the market that you may rub on your larger pieces of polished silver that will allow them to keep their luster longer.

Flatware should be cleaned at least once a month, and don't be tempted to save your sterling. Constant use makes it even more beautiful. Be sure you count your flatware after each using because it is very easy for a piece to be thrown into the garbage pail in the rush of clearing up after guests.

PROPOSE TURNABOUT IN STRATEGY

Subordination Of Convoy System Studied To Outsmart Nazi U-Boats

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6.—(AP)—The menace of German submarine raids in the North Atlantic raised speculation in naval circles today that a complete turnabout in strategy, subordinating the use of convoys, might prove the eventual answer to the U-boat wolf-pack technique.

The central theory in the various methods being explored was that mass submarine attacks would be rendered largely ineffective if armed merchantmen travelled singly instead of being bunched in convoys.

The discussions accompanied two fresh developments in the battle of the Atlantic — the announcement that 17 American and two Canadian civilian technicians had been lost en route to Britain, and the disclosure U-boats have been operating close to Newfoundland.

Exponents of the single-vessel strategy to outsmart U-boat packs said that its logical application called for a minimum use of convoys, the routing of ships over a wide variety of constantly changing sea lanes and giving them guns to fight attacks.

That, it was said, would free a large number of naval vessels to patrol the areas north and southwest of the British Isles in search of submarines plying between European bases and their Atlantic hunting grounds.

The convoy system, naval men say, was developed to a high point of perfection in 1917 and 1918. Its successful operation, then as now, depended on the submarine's great risk in attacking a group of ships protected by destroyers.

AVOID OPEN ACTION

The record of the U.S. Atlantic fleet so far in the present war, however, is generally taken in Washington as indicating that to some extent at least the submarines of today no longer take such great risks.

Guided by highly sensitive sound detection equipment and operating in groups with the aid of very efficient radio communication, they attack under protection of night and avoid the dangers of open encounter with surface vessels by daylight.

Official disclosure in Canada yesterday that Nazi submarines have been operating off Newfoundland indicated how the Nazis probably have been able to find their objectives so well after dark in the perilous arer west of Iceland.

TRAIL CONVOY

The generally accepted belief here is that the long-range subs off Newfoundland lie in wait, not to attack, but to spot and trail convoys from a safe distance soon after they leave port.

Keeping out of sight, a spotter submarine may trail a convoy and its naval escort for two or three days without its presence even being suspected.

When it reaches the west-of-Iceland area the big U-boat, by radio, gives position and probable route of the quarry to a group of the smaller, shorter range U-boats operating in that area and itself heads for home. The small subs then launch their attack at the most favorable moment.

Two Canadians, 17 Americans Perish At Sea

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6—(AP)—Two Canadian and 17 American civilians were listed Wednesday night as the latest casualties in the war at sea. The men had enlisted in the British Civilian Technical Corps for various kinds of non-combatant service in Britain. The ship taking them to the other side "is presumed to have been sunk," the British Press Service announced here. "And there is no knowledge yet of any survivors."

The Canadians were W. C. Andrews of Sarnia, Ont., and J. D Berier, Calgary, Alta.

"Telegrams have been sent to the next of kin, it was announced. "Expressing the deep sympathy of the British Air Council."

SHIP NOT IDENTIFIED

The announcement, issued by the British Press Service on behalf of the Royal Air Force delegation in Washington, did not identify the ship or the port from which she sailed or give any further details.

The missing civilians were presumably skilled radio and automobile mechanics, electrical wiremen, instrument repairers, metal workers and other members of technical trades whom the British authorities have been recruiting in Canada and the United States.

The civilian technical corps has been seeking several thousand men between the ages of 21 and 30, principally for repairing vital equipment used by the British armed forces.

JOIN BRITISH CORPS

Federal officials generally have encouraged American technicians to join the British Corps on the theory not only that they will assist in the British war effort but also that they would obtain valuable training which would be of service in the United States in the event of hostilities.

Goering Missed Death By Minutes

By HELEN KIRKPATRICK

LONDON, Nov. 6.—(CDN)—Sunday night's train wreck at the Paris Austerlitz station was not the first big one to occur in the Paris district, according to a neutral who has just arrived in London from Berlin via Sweden. A big one occurred some weeks ago. As a result Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering does not go to Paris any more.

Six "Communists" blew up a railway bridge not far from Paris 10 minutes after Goering's train had passed over it. They had been waiting for a Germany-bound troop train. They got it but probably never knew how easily they might have got Goering instead.

Goering's trip had been planned secretly and the Gestapo apparently were convinced that news of it had leaked out. As a result the Reichsmarshal was not permitted to remain in Paris but was immediately rushed back to Berlin by plane.

Now, at the insistence of the Fuehrer, Goering has given up his Paris visits—says they're neutral.

Post-War Social Changes Forecast For South Africa

LONDON, Nov. 6.—(CP)—Gen. Jan Christian Smuts, Prime Minister of South Africa, said Wednesday in a speech quoted by the British Broadcasting Corporation that the war will bring "far-reaching social changes" to South Africa.

Branding the "German experiment" a failure, Gen. Smuts forecast a "new order of things, very different from that in which we were born and through which we have lived."

"But we are not out of the woods yet," he warned. "There is still a long road before us and nobody knows what lies ahead."

Third Set Of Twins

WEST POINT, Neb., Nov. 6.—(AP)—The stork brought twin girls, Donna Mae and Fonda Rae, to Mr. and Mrs. Dennis Henke in 1928. Jan. 2 a boy and Janet, a girl, arrived in 1939. The third set of twins, boys, was born this week.

Nazis' Largest Warship Damaged

LONDON, Nov. 6.—(CP)—A British press report from Stockholm today said Germany's largest warship, the Tirpitz, one of three battleships remaining to the Reich after her sister ship, the Bismarck, was sunk by the British fleet last May, was damaged in a Russian aid raid on Danzig last Monday night.

The B.B.C. broadcast the report, which came in a dispatch of the London Daily Telegraph's Stockholm correspondent, but naval circles refrained from comment.

When the Bismarck was sunk to even the score after her destruction of the 42,100-ton British battle cruiser Hood, Germany was left with two 26,000-ton battleships, the Scharnhorst and Gneisenau, pinned in Brest by the R.A.F., besides the heavier Tirpitz.

In naval manuals, the Tirpitz and Bismarck was credited with standard displacements of 35,000 tons, but after the Bismarck was sunk British officers said she displaced nearer 50,000 tons.

Chinese Troops May Aid Russia New York Hears

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—(AP)—Roundabout reports from unidentified sources were received in New York Wednesday to the effect that Chinese troops are going to the aid of Russia against the German invaders.

The Morocco radio said the Chinese would send 40,000 troops to Russia, asserting its information came from China dispatches which said the general commanding the Chinese 18th Army had made the decision to send help.

Later the Swiss radio, heard here by NBC, identified the 18th Army as consisting of Chinese Communists and said reports from North China related that 100,000 of these troops would be sent to European Russia at Russia's request.

NO CONFIRMATION

Whether by "North China" it meant Japanese-controlled areas the radio did not say.

There was no confirmation of the reports from other sources.

Last January Gen. Chiang Kai-Shek, of the Chungking government, disbanded the Communist new fourth army on grounds of insubordination, and in March refused Communist demands that special areas along Soviet lines be set up in China.

Last July 26, however, four days after the German invasion of Russia, London sources reported that Chiang and Premier Joseph Stalin had reached an agreement whereby 500,000 Chinese troops would help Russia if Japan should attack the Soviet Union.

Tokyo Observers Predict Showdown With Americans

NEW YORK, Nov. 6.—(AP)—The Tokyo radio said Wednesday night Japanese observers were abandoned every hope for some sort of an understanding with the United States in the light of the failure of American public opinion toward Japan.

The radio, heard by NBC, also said these observers predict a showdown between the two countries is inevitable in the near future.

Britain May Need More Oil Tankers From U.S. Stated

SAN FRANCISCO, Nov. 6.—(AP)—The United States may have to supply Britain with many more tankers than it has loaned in the past and it may yet be confronted with a shortage of domestic as well as aviation gasoline, Harold Ickes, federal petroleum co-ordinator, told the oil industry Wednesday.

Addressing the American Petroleum Institute, Ickes said: "Our refiners of motor fuel are now pretty close to 100 per cent capacity and the demand continues to rise."

Is Electrocuted

CALGARY, Nov. 6.—(CP)—Hugh Walter Simpson, 30, Calgary, was electrocuted while installing a switch in a line at the Ogden shops munitions plant at 11:30 a.m. Wednesday. Coroner Dr. George R. Johnson ordered an inquest for Thursday evening.

May Go To U.S.

Maxim M. Litvinoff, above, former Soviet foreign minister, was reported in Washington diplomatic circles today to have been selected to succeed Constantine Oumansky as Russian ambassador to the United States.

Litvinoff May Become Envoy At Washington

WASHINGTON, Nov. 6—(AP)—Maxim M. Litvinoff, former Soviet foreign minister, was reported in diplomatic circles today to have been selected to succeed Constantine Oumansky as Russian ambassador to Washington.

Oumansky is now in Russia, having gone to Moscow at the same time an American mission went to the Soviet capital to make an investigation of Russia's war needs.

At the time of Oumansky's departure it was reported in diplomatic circles here that he would not return to the United States, although Madame Oumansky remained at the embassy.

Litvinoff, when foreign minister, negotiated recognition of the Soviet Union by the United States in 1933 in conferences with President Roosevelt. This resulted in the resumption of diplomatic relations between the two countries after a lapse of nearly 20 years.

Reinforcements Reach Singapore

SINGAPORE, Nov. 6.—(AP)—A troopship convoy from the United Kingdom arrived today in Singapore, bringing reinforcements—several thousands strong—for Britain's Far Eastern command.

The arrivals included numerous men for the Royal Air Force, infantry, anti-aircraft and search-light units, and reinforcements for auxiliary services.

Tory Leader For Saskatchewan To Relinquish Post

REGINA, Nov. 6.—(CP)—J. G. Diefenbaker, Conservative member of parliament for Lake Centre, will resign next spring as leader of the Conservative party in Saskatchewan because of pressure of Ottawa duties.

At the moment, no one has been mentioned as a possible successor to the Saskatchewan leadership and the resignation of Mr. Diefenbaker has not yet even been considered by the executive of the association.

P.O. Revenue

OTTAWA, Nov. 6.—(CP)—Post Office department revenue in the fiscal year 1940-41 was $48,143,409, a gain of $2,923,040 over 1939-40, said the annual report of the department tabled in the Commons Wednesday by Postmaster-General Mulock. The net surplus for the year was $1,663,692.

Parachutists Are Captured Vichy States

VICHY, Nov. 6.—(AP)—The Vichy government Wednesday night claimed the discovery and capture of an unstated number of Free French parachutists in western unoccupied France and the capture of a grounded British plane loaded with Free French "propaganda" in the same vicinity.

(The dispatch gave no indication as to when the parachutists are supposed to have been rounded up.)

The plane, said to be carrying instructions for Free French agents, was reported captured near Perigueux two days ago when it was forced down by bad weather. The entire British crew was reported held.

DE GAULLE FOLLOWERS

The parachutist troops reported landing in the vicinity of Perigueux—all of whom also claimed captured—were said to have been French followers of Gen. Charles De Gaulle.

Reports here said they were mostly natives of the region who were sent to hide themselves until opportunities to commit sabotage occurred.

(This dispatch is the first mention from Vichy of parachute troops having been found in France, but refugees arriving in New York some months ago told of paramedists systematically dropped in French districts to bolster morale and aid in opposing the Nazis.)

Perigueux is one of the largest centres of unoccupied France that is near Bordeaux in the occupied zone.

It was at Bordeaux that Jacque Doriot's semi-Fascist party boasted Tuesday of attacking a synagogue which was claimed to be headquarters of a British movement in France.

Japanese Firms In Burma Advised To Leave Country

LONDON, Nov. 6—(CP)—Singapore dispatches said Wednesday the Japanese consul-general in Rangoon had advised all Japanese firms in Burma to leave. Japanese-owned iron mines in Burma were reported to be closing down.

NEW DELHI, India, Nov. 6—(CP)—Virtually all Japanese in India, including consular officials, have left the country in an exchange agreement, it was announced yesterday.

The evacuation ship, Hijemaru, sailed from Bombay for Japan Monday with 291 Japanese nationals from India and the Middle East, including the Japanese consul-general and acting-consul at Calcutta.

Prime Minister Says U.S. Visit Purely Personal

OTTAWA, Nov. 6—(CP)—Prime Minister Mackenzie King Wednesday told the Commons his visit with President Roosevelt last week-end at Hyde Park, N.Y., was "a purely personal visit."

"But," he added, "I would not have it to be assumed that the President and I did not discuss public matters. There was a very free exchange of thought and information."

The Prime Minister made his statement in reply to a request from Conservative house leader Hanson for a report on his visit with Mr. Roosevelt.

Many Articles To Be Affected By New Restrictions

MONTREAL, Nov. 6. — (CP) — Table tops, dress ornaments, nail polish, automobiles, washing machines, radios and even umbrella handles will be among the many things affected by the new curb on civilian use of lacquer announced Monday by Douglas Lorimer, Dominion chemical controller.

Mr. Lorimer said Wednesday "the reason we cannot make commercial lacquers today is that the materials required to make them are needed for airplanes and shells. Which do the public want, shells or shiny automobiles, planes or paint brush handles?"

On its closest approach to the earth, Halley's comet came within a distance of 14,000,000 miles, on May 20, 1910.
